CICOTTE EAGER TO PITCH

Veteran Twirler Begs White Sox Manager for Chance to Come Back

Chicago, Oct. 4.—"This is another day," remarked Pat Moran, shortly after sunrise.

"Quite so, quite so," commented Kid Gleason. "Another day for breaking up that Cincinnati outfit."

All of which merely echoes the sentiments of the hoi polloi hereabouts.

The natives, heartened by the White Sox triumph Friday, feel that the turn has come in the fortunes of their favorites; that now they are in full stride toward the goal of another World's Series championship.

"Dutch" Reuther, who pitched the Sox into submission and clubbed them to a pulp on opening day, probably will be sent after them today. Just who will do the flinging for the Sox is a matter for conjecture. Probably it will be Eddie Cicotte, who is begging for another whirl. Possibly Erskine Mayer will draw the assignment. There's a slim chance for Bill James.

It's a rather tough plight, that of Gleason. He doesn't know what Mayer or James can do. He does know the Reds bumped Cicotte off the mound, and he is not sure whether Eddie can do a successful "comeback."

And the Kid wants today's game—oh, how he wants it. The victory will make it all even again. Whereas defeat will force the Sox to win four combats before the Reds annex two.

Meanwhile the betting, which has shown about as many shifts as a prima donna, has moods, is suffering another convulsion.

Its even money on today's affair and only 2 to 5—a drop from yesterday 2½ to 1—that the Reds grab the championship bunting.

STATE GUARD IS PRAISED FOR WORK

The State Guard was praised as having performed an important duty, with an efficiency that has done honor to the State, in a letter from Charles T. Cahill, secretary of the National Guard Association of Massachusetts, to Adjutant-General Jesse F. Stevens.

BELGIUM'S PRIMATE HERE

Hero-Prelate Welcomed at Station by Cardinal O'Connell and Cheering Throng

After a triumphal progress from Springfield, during which his train was stopped at several cities by admiring throngs, Cardinal Mercier of Belgium arrived in Boston at 11:35 a. m. today.

He was met at the Huntington avenue station by Cardinal O'Connell, who extended greetings. A throng of many hundreds was on hand when the train arrived and gave the heroic primate a thunderous welcome.

After a warm greeting between the two prelates, and after Cardinal Mercier had waved a friendly greeting to the assembled crowds, he was whisked away in a limousine to the home of Cardinal O'Connell in Brookline. He will be the guest of the latter during his stay in Boston.

Cardinal Mercier was in good health and excellent spirits after a restful night. He gave little outward sign of the strain under which he has labored since coming to America.

"I shall during my stay in your city speak at some length on my pastoral, in which I denied the right of German officers to interfere in affairs between me and my people," said the Belgian primate.

The Cardinal's train was stopped at Worcester, where a big crowd was on hand to greet him. In the crowd were 875 Holy Cross College students, who had been given a holiday in honor of his coming.

The aged churchman laughed boyishly as he was greeted by the students, who cheered him to the echo.

GERMANS REMAIN BARRED FROM ARMY

Major F. B. Shaw and Captain G. C. Elsey, chief and assistant recruiting officers for Boston and vicinity, announced they have received no intimation that the War Department contemplates any change in its attitude towards Germans. They declared that their orders are positive to the effect that all races can be enlisted with the exception of enemy aliens. The statement was inspired by a report from New York to the effect that Professor Braun of Columbia University had been urged to co-operate in securing for the army German young men who may come to this country.

TAKES ALLEGED AUTO THIEVES AT GUNPOINT

Inspector Timothy J. Sheehan of the Boston Police Department arrested five alleged automobile thieves at the point of a pistol in a shack in the woods of South Wilmington early today.

Two of the men, John Hine, twenty-five, of South Wilmington, and Edward Pennessey, nineteen, of Wilmington, were brought to Boston, where they were charged with the larceny of a touring car. The other three were turned over to Chief Hill of the Wilmington police, who charged them with breaking and entering and larceny in that town.

The police recovered a touring car, the property of Dr. William L. Turetsky of No. 1077 Blue Hill avenue, Dorchester, alleged to have been stolen from this city August 15. They also found a Remington rifle, a cash register, automobile tires and accessories believed to have been stolen in Wilmington recently.

Inspector Sheehan went to Wilmington and informed Chief Hill that he believed two auto thieves were living in a shack in the woods. The two men went to the shack, and while Hill remained outside, Sheehan forced an entrance. Instead of finding two men he discovered five. Drawing his revolver, he commanded the gang to put up their hands. They complied and the entire party was herded into an automobile.

Straddle on Treaty by State G. O. P.

A compromise on the peace treaty, indorsing both the activities of Senator Henry Cabot Lodge and the treaty itself, was agreed on by the Committee on Platform just before the Republican State convention at Tremont Temple was called to order today.

As formulated by the committee, this plank in the State platform indorsed the peace treaty with certain reservations, the latter said to have been suggested by Former Senator W. Murray Crane, and also put the seal of approval on Senator Lodge's general activities. But it was no by any means a victory for Lodge.

Senator Lodge was the first notable public man to arrive at the convention. Owing to his illness, Governor Coolidge was not present at the opening of the convention. He arrived about noon, and remained but a short time. Henry Long, his secretary, stated that the Governor still suffers from acute bronchitis.

Mrs. Coolidge, and her two children reached the convention a few minutes after Senator Lodge. The Governor's family was escorted by State officers.

The convention hall was handsomely but simply decorated, the national colors prevailing.

At 10:50 Senator Lodge led the

TO SUBMIT LIST OF WILSON GIFTS TO CONGRESS

By International News Service.

Washington, Oct. 4—A complete inventory of the gifts received by President Wilson during his stay in Europe is being prepared at the White House, it was stated today, and will be forwarded to Congress probably next week.

This action follows charges made on the floor of the Senate, particularly by Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania, that the President received gifts totalling in value more than $1,000,000 and in violation of the law.

The White House inventory will show that the intrinsic value of the presents received by the President was negligible and that they were taken with the knowledge and tacit consent of Attorney-General Palmer and Secretary of State Lansing, both of who reassured the President that their acceptance was in violation of now law.

"Two old guns and a book from the King of Italy," will be a typical item of the inventory, it was stated.

SEEK ADMISSION TO LEAGUE OF NATIONS

Washington, Oct. 4.—The Lithuanian, Latvian and Esthonian representatives at Paris are co-operating for the recognition of their respective governments by the Peace Council and for admission to the League of Nations, according to a cablegram to the Lithuanian executive committee here today.

GAINS AFTER GOOD NIGHT'S REST

"My temperature may be normal, but if you insist on keeping me in bed forever my temper won't be."—President Wilson to Dr. Grayson.

By International News Service.

Washington, Oct. 4. "The President had a good night's rest and his condition is more favorable," Rear-Admiral Cary T. Grayson reported in his official statement on the President's condition today.

Dr. Grayson was greatly encouraged when he discussed the President's case following the issuance of his bulletin. He attributed the change for the better entirely to the good night of natural sleep that the President had, and expressed the belief that if this continued there soon would be a marked change for the better.

Dr. Grayson also reiterated his declaration that the President's mind was keen and alert. He added that the President was disappointed because he must keep to his bed and do no work.

President Wilson's three daughters and his son-in-law, William G. McAdoo and Francis B. Sayre, remained at the executive mansion in order to be on hand should the President's condition take a graver aspect.

After the issuance of Dr. Grayson's bulletin today the four physicians—Dr. Grayson, Rear-Admiral Stitt, U. S. N., Dr. F. X. Dercum, the Philadelphia nerve specialist, and Dr. George de Schweinitz, the eye, nose and throat specialist—held an extended conference. They went into consultation at 11:30 o'clock and did not emerge until after 1 o'clock. The two Philadelphia physicians came out of the conference and were driven away in a White House automobile.

Both Dr. F. X. Dercum, the neurologist, and Dr. George De Schweinitz, the President's oculist, who also is a nose and throat specialist, were at the White House today for consultation.

MANY WILD RUMORS.

Dr. Grayson said that there was no especial significance in the conference, as that had been previously arranged. Yesterday and again today the most alarming rumors circulated here and in New York concerning the President's condition, and these spread across the country in the strange way that rumors have of finding circulation.

This was in part accounted for by the fact that the official bulletins from the White House were not, and of course, could not be, definite in their character. As a matter of fact Dr. Grayson and his consultants had

REPUBLICAN CONVENTION EXTENDS SYMPATHY TO WILSON

OVATION IS GIVEN LODGE

Mention of Governor Coolidge Also Calls for Prolonged Applause

procession of dignitaries upon the platform followed in order by former Senators Crane and Weeks, Congressmen Luce, Treadway, Fuller, former Governor Bates, Secretary of State Langer and Chairman Frank R. Hall of the State committee.

Followed five minutes of singing in chorus, "Glory, Glory, Hallelujah," after the storm of applause with which Senator Lodge was greeted had subsided there were three cheers given thrice, and then a minute of handclapping and cheering.

At 10 o'clock Chairman Hall formally opened the convention and called upon the chaplain to read the official call. The opening prayer was made by Rev. Jason Noble Pierce of Dorchester.

MUST BE MORE ALERT.

Colonel Frank S. Perkins moved that Chairman Hall and Secretary Pfeiffer serve as temporary officers.

His every reference to the success of the Republican party was greeted with applause. His remark that former Governor Foss was born in Vermont, that he had was Vermont's gain was Massachusetts' loss evoked a great burst of laughter. The leading power of the Republican party was solemnly impressed upon the delegate and they were warned that the party to succeed must be more alert in the making of new citizens.

Cheers greeted his reference to Speaker Gillett, but the convention burst into a wild uproar of cheering and noise when he spoke of Senator Lodge as the leader of the United States Senate.

There was another outbreak when he called the scholar of Nahant the "noblest Roman of them all." J. Mitchell Galvin sailed for the cheers from the platform.

The delegates insisted upon the Senatorial and Congressional endorsements. A feather-lunged fan in the gallery insisted upon three more cheers. The applause bubbled along for a minute or so.

LODGE SHOWS MODESTY.

When Chairman Hall referred to Governor Coolidge, Senator Lodge jumped to his feet and shouted "Everybody up for Governor Coolidge. Now, then, three rousing cheers." They were given with a will.

Senator Lodge very modestly covered his face with his hand while the cheers showered him down, but he was pleased and smiling when he uncovered his countenance.

SYMPATHY TO WILSON.

Speaker Warner moved the appointment of the platform committee and that all resolutions be referred to the committee without debate. Representative B. Loring Young moved the appointment of the committee on ballot.

While waiting for the report of the committee on resolutions Chairman Hall called upon the official cheer and song leaders to liven things up. He attack out with "I'm forever blowing bubbles," and followed with the "Long, long trail."

In opening his address, Congressman Treadway, permanent chairman of the convention, said:

"While we are gathered in convention as Republicans we are first of all Americans. The President of the United States is ill at the White House. Let us extend our sincere sympathy and express a fervent hope for the early restoration to health and vigor. His labors have tested his virility to the utmost. We pray that he may be spared to continue his official responsibilities. His illness is a sorrow to the entire nation.

Mr. Treadway's speech consisted of a resume of Republican activities in the present Congress and of the activities of the party in this State under the leadership of Governor Coolidge.

GOVERNOR'S VOICE WEAK.

It was just 1 o'clock when Congressman Treadway announced the presence of Governor Coolidge, who was accompanied by Lieutenant-Governor Cox. The Governor was given a real ovation. He plainly showed the effects of his illness as he read his address. His voice was not strong.

The delegates showed very plainly that they were in accord with the Governor as he explained his course in the strike of the Boston policemen. When he announced that, so long as he is Governor, the right of law enforcement would not be surrendered to agitators, was thunderously indorsed.

Lieutenant-Governor Cox was given three rousing cheers as he was presented. The Governor patted him on the shoulder in a fatherly manner as he left the stage just as the lieutenant-governor arose to speak.

The Governor was at the convention altogether only twenty minutes.

Convention Two-Sided in Its Stand on Treaty in Party Platform

The peace treaty was the first subject in the platform considered by the convention. This and the other purely national issues were treated as follows:

"We favor prompt ratification of the Treaty of Peace, without delay, but with such unequivocal and effective reservations as will make clear the unconditional right of the United States to withdraw from the League on notice; as will protect the United States shall assume its share in helping to enjoy American soldiers or sailors unless Congress shall, by act or resolution, so direct; as will make it clear that no domestic questions such as the tariff and immigration, will be taken from the control of the United States, and that the United States shall be sole judge as to the interpretation of the Monroe Doctrine. There must be no abridgment of the sovereignty of the nation, of the control of its own domestic affairs, or of the maintenance of its national policies.

PROUD OF LODGE'S WORK.

"The Republican party commends the broad and far-sighted statesmanship of its senior Senator, Henry Cabot Lodge, whose experience, integrity and wisdom continue to reflect honor upon the State, which is proud to regard him as its senior and foremost representative in the Congress of the United States, and heartily indorses his efforts to bring about prompt action on the treaty.

"The Republican party also rejoices in this opportunity to voice its appreciation of the long, arduous and splendid service of Frederick H. Gillett and of the great honor bestowed upon him in the Speakership of the National House, alike the pride of his Republican colleagues in Congress and of that Commonwealth whose name he upholds.

"We deprecate the action by our State Committee on Public Safety in opposing the wishes of the Italian people with regard to Fiume, and the Democratic plank relative to Fiume. We condemn their course in consenting to the dismemberment of China, that Republican ally, by conniving her of her richest province, Shantung.

"The Republican party has always stood for a protective tariff. We reaffirm our adherence to that policy."

TO DRIVE DOWN PRICES.

Coming to State issues, the platform reviews at great length legislation passed for the benefit of former service men; gives the Republican party full credit for organizing the State Guard, which is highly commended; and charges that the Democratic plank to reduce the high cost of living has proved "but an empty promise," while the Republican party in the Commonwealth is taking active and forceful measures.

"We propose to protect the common people of Massachusetts from those unscrupulous profiteers who, for the last eight years, have fattened and thrived on Democratic indolence and favoritism," says the platform.

"We favor an immediate study, by the best experts available, of the present laws on taxation, with a view to securing a larger share of public revenue from taxes upon the luxuries of life; thereby decreasing the present busy burden upon small householders and upon the productive industries of the Commonwealth."

Other significant passages follow:

"In the future, as in the past, we propose to give capital, labor and the consumer alike a square deal and legislation in harmony with the progress of the times."

"The Republicans of Massachusetts strongly condemn mob violence and the murdering and lynching of negroes, and call upon Congress to enact legislation which shall enable the colored man to exercise his right to vote."

Governor Coolidge is most enthusiastically lauded, and his stand in the police situation heartily endorsed.

The resolutions were unanimously adopted.

agreed upon diagnosis, but the President was making a fight and it was not known from hour to hour whether this might turn to the favorable or the unfavorable side.

It was explained that the uncertainties of the neurasthenic condition of the President were particularly baffling and that this was typical of his disease. Nervous collapse, it was stated, may give off the most alarming symptoms, but these may soon disappear if the patient responds to treatment, and particularly if the right kind of relaxation or natural sleep.

It was learned today that there had been times since the President's return to Washington when he could not compass himself to natural sleep and sleep was induced by artificial means, but the results were not satisfactory. It was only when he found natural rest that he seemed to show refreshment.

The President's nervous condition is regarded as the leading difficulty, demanding complete mental relaxation, but it is complicated in part by intestinal weakness which resulted from influenza which attacked him in Paris. Then too, it is said that there is a slight tissue obstruction in the nasal passages which is annoying. Sometimes the President has been bothered by a hacking cough, which may in part be due to the nervous state.

lishly as he sighted the students. "I am glad to bring you a message from Belgium," he said. "I am also glad to bring you a holiday, which I know is appreciated. I wish I could shake with you, var, and perfect myself in your language."

The primate's train was stopped for a few minutes at Framingham, where the Cardinal spoke briefly. He spent most of the time on the observation platform admiring the beautiful country through which he was being taken, and caused a brief halt at Palmer while he surveyed the scenery.

SPENTS RULERS SUNDAY.

The meeting between the Belgian primate and the King and Queen of his country at the mass he is to celebrate, will be the first since the middle of August, just before he left his native land. At that time King Albert and his consort were among those assisting at a mass for the victims of the Dinant massacre.

After Cardinal O'Connell's greeting the party proceeded to Brookline, where they rested until late this afternoon. They then made a tour of the park system and the suburbs, although several audiences were granted this afternoon the Cardinal will not attend any functions until tomorrow.

This evening he will spend in writing and resting for the long series of exercises and masses that will follow in the next two days.

The most brilliant feature of Cardinal Mercier's visit in Boston will be the ceremony at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross tomorrow morning, his first public appearance in the city. At the mass, which will be held at 10 o'clock, he will be assisted by Cardinal O'Connell with several members of the monsignori in attendance.

DOORS OPEN AT 9:15.

The doors of the Cathedral will be thrown open to the public at 9:15 and seats may be secured in any part of the edifice with the exception of a few seats reserved for official guests in view of this no early masses will be held.

Among the distinguished guests at the mass will be King Albert of Belgium, Queen Elisabeth, Crown Prince Leopold and the Belgian royal suite, Governor Coolidge, Mayor Peters and his reception committee will also attend.

Following the ceremony, Cardinal Mercier will return to Cardinal O'Connell's home, where the latter will act as host to the Cardinal Archbishop of Malines at dinner.

Under the auspices of the League of Catholic Women of Boston, a reception will be tendered both Cardinals at Notre Dame Academy at 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

At 7 o'clock, in the Touraine Hotel, both Cardinals will attend a guest of the State at a dinner attended by Governor Coolidge and leading State officials.

Shortly before noon on Monday Cardinal Mercier will be formally welcomed by the city at Faneuil Hall, where Mayor Peters will preside over the exercises. Later he will visit St. John's Ecclesiastical Seminary, Boston College, Harvard and Boston College.

ARREST DEALER IN AUTO THEFT INQUIRY

The thirty-first arrest in connection with the so-called "syndicate" of automobile thieves is that of Barney Cohen, aged thirty-six, proprietor of the Metropolitan Motor Mart in Paris Square.

He was taken into custody at his place of business on charges of conspiracy to steal automobiles and receiving stolen cars. The arrest was made by Captain John A. Cheney of the Cambridge police, State Detective Silas P. Smith and Detective Finn of the Boston police headquarters.

Cohen was taken to the office of the Middlesex district attorney at East Cambridge, where his bail was placed at $10,000. He furnished the bond and was released.

CHARLESTOWN BOY KILLED BY TRUCK

Injuries sustained when a motor truck ran over him on Main street, Charlestown, caused the death at the Relief Hospital half an hour later of Thomas Furey, aged 9, of No. 74 School street, Charlestown.

The office of Whittemore & Woodbury, in the rear of No. 455 Medford street, Charlestown, was entered and ransacked, but nothing of value was taken. A custom of putting the payroll money in the safe on Fridays was recently changed and the burglars found the safe empty of money.

MORE BIG STEEL MILLS OPEN MONDAY

Situation in Pittsburgh District Appears Better; Strikers Issue New Appeal

By International News Service.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 4.—The close of the second week of the steel strike today found the situation in the Pittsburgh district little changed from that existing for the last several days. Mills that had been operating only partially were being prepared to start in full on Monday, while others that had been closed were to open with the beginning of the third week.

Handbills directed at the deputy sheriffs and special policemen stationed at the steel plants, were distributed in the mill sections here during the night.

"We cannot believe that you have become traitors and betrayers of your fellow-workers," the appeal read. "You have worked with us and now you are doing the dirty work of the master. Be not a Judas Iscariot or a Benedict Arnold. Join with us and together we will win this strike for the benefit of all. Be men, not yellow dogs."

CLAIMS HUSBAND LEFT HER ON HONEYMOON

Mildred A. Chipman of Boston says she was deceived when she married Charles J. Johnson, and has petitioned the Superior Court of Suffolk County to annul the marital contract.

On Dec 4, 1918, she alleged, a marriage ceremony was performed at Spokane, and the groom gave the name of Johnson and said he lived at Fairbank, Alaska. They lived together as man and wife for seven days in Spokane, and then at St. Maries, Idaho, for two days. The last time she saw him was at St. Marie on Dec. 12, 1918, and after that time he vanished from her sight.

Johnson represented that he was residing with his niece, Goldie Newman, and her husband, Charles Newman, at Fairbank, that he was engaged in the mining business and had a deposit in the First National Bank of Spokane.

In investigation the petitioner says that all the statements made by Johnson were untrue, and as a part of the scheme of fraud to enjoy her society for a brief period he gave a false name so that his future movements might not readily be traced.

FORGING FATHER'S NAME IS CHARGED

A son's feeble effort to imitate his father's signature to four money orders caused the arrest and arraignment before Federal Commissioner Hayes of Walter Minnehane, eighteen years old, of Green street.

Minnehane, who is a brakeman employed by the Boston & Maine railroad, was charged with forgery of the name of his father, James Minnehane, to four postal savings orders totalling $50. When the father missed the four savings orders he reported the fact to the Postal Savings Department at North station, with the result that the son was apprehended. The son pleaded no guilty and his case was continued until October 20.

CUT IN MILK PRICE ANNOUNCED BY HOOD

H. P. Hood & Sons, milk dealers, announce a cut of a quarter of a cent in the price of milk this month.

C. C. Davis of the Hood company, gave out the following statement:

"On account of the fact that the milk producers have withdrawn their offer to us for the months of November and December, of ten cents per quart for milk delivered in Boston, and at the request of the Commission under the Necessaries of Life, we shall reduce the price of milk from sixteen and one-half cents per quart to sixteen and a quarter cents per quart for the month of October."

Cardinal Mercier to Be Made Knight of Columbus

New York, Oct. 4.—Cardinal Mercier, the famous Belgian prelate, will have the degree of knighthood conferred upon him at a reception and banquet, at which he will be the principal guest of the Knights of Columbus, next Thursday evening at the Hotel Commodore.

Supreme Knight James A. Flaherty will confer the degree which will make Cardinal Mercier a member of the order.

MACHINE GUNS ARE SET UP IN LONDON

Lord Mayor Prepares for Trouble in Connection With Crisis in Strike Situation

By International News Service.

London, Oct. 4.—Great Britain was plunged into a new industrial crisis today by the collapse of the strike negotiations between Premier Lloyd George and the representatives of labor. The war cabinet was hastily called into session at Premier Lloyd George's official residence in Downing street.

Steps were taken by the Lord Mayor to form a "Citizens Army" for the preservation of order in London. Troop movements were said to be increasing and barricades, defended with machine guns, were constructed at strategic points.

Some of the labor leaders, including Captain James O'Grady and H. G. Stuart-Bunning, head of the postmen's union, said that they did not consider that the door to further negotiations had been definitely closed.

H. Gosling and R. Williams have telegraphed to all of the trade unions represented at the Glasgow conference to send representatives to the special congress next week. According to present plans the meeting will last two days.

While the situation appeared more menacing than at any other time since the railwaymen went out, efforts at mediation are still being made. The Exchange Telegraph announced that a committee of four-teen labor leaders were summoned to meet this afternoon to formulate counter proposals and arrange to see the Premier with them before the special meeting of the Trade Union Congress on Tuesday.

At the meeting of the trade union representatives on Tuesday the executive of the Triple Alliance—the transport workers and the coal miners—as well as other labor organizations will be considered.

That the fight will be a bitter one is made plain by the action of the National Union of Railwaymen in rejecting the Premier's proposal for a seven-day truce.

Official steps are being taken to cope with the alarm and panic in and out of London. Emergency orders have been issued by the commissioner of police summoning all special constables to report to headquarters. King George and Queen Mary are hastening to London from Balmoral Castle in Scotland.

The Daily News states that J. H. Thomas, executive secretary of the National Union of Railwaymen, and leader of the strike, probably will seek a personal interview with the King upon his arrival.

LONG BEAT FOSS BY 42,852 VOTES

Richard H. Long defeated Eugene N. Foss for the Democratic nomination for Governor by 42,852 votes, the official returns tabulated at the office of the Secretary of State show. Long's majority over his three opponents was 18,317. Foss received 128,145 votes, defeating the Framingham man with 82,970. Governor Coolidge led the Republican ticket with a total of 123,145 votes. Fred J. Burrell of Medford won for treasurer over Colonel Frank S. Perkins of Salem by 7,169.

ASKS HOUSE FOR EARLY LEAGUE SESSION

Clemenceau in Letter Suggests First Meeting in Washington Next Month

By International News Service.

Paris, Oct. 4.—In the belief that the League of Nations ought to meet as soon as possible, Premier Clemenceau has written a letter to Colonel E. M. House of the American peace delegation, suggesting that the first meeting be held in Washington in November.

The press interprets Clemenceau's letter as meaning that the French premier believes that it is necessary for the League of Nations to come into operation at the earliest possible moment.

The Figaro, in commenting upon the letter, points to the Fiume incident. This paper says:

"A compromise assuring Italy possession of Fiume in fact, while it is theoretically under control of the League of Nations in law would appear impossible."

R. I. TO VOTE ON $100 BONUS FOR SOLDIERS

Providence, R. I., Oct. 4.—A special election will be called in Rhode Island to pass on the $100 bonus for service men and $2,500,000 will be sought through referendum to eliminate further delay, if the plans of Governor Beeckman do not miscarry, it was learned today.

The announcement by the chief executive recently that he favored a $100 bonus is said to have been frowned upon by political leaders. The Governor's statement was termed "political buncombe."

It is learned today from a reliable source that Governor Beeckman will recommend that a special election be held immediately after the General Assembly convenes in January and the voters be asked to pass judgment on the $100 bonus plan which will be paid through the medium of a bond issue.

It is further learned that military organizations have criticized the Governor for his lack of interest during the last session when a similar resolution offered by Luigi DePasquale, Democratic deputy floor leader of the House, was pigeonholed. DePasquale told the members at the time that he considered it proper to "put the state in hock" in the interest of soldiers, sailors and marines.

LABOR TO GIVE 'INSIDE' STORY ON POLICE

Central Labor Union to Consider Report of Mayor's Committee Tomorrow

Organized labor will define its attitude toward the report of the Mayor's committee of thirty-four, relative to the police strike, at a meeting of the Central Labor Union tomorrow afternoon at 2:30.

Frank H. McCarthy of the American Federation, who organized the police, declined today to discuss the report in any of its phases. James H. Vahey and John P. Feeney, counsel for the police, likewise declined to comment.

The special committee of seventeen, which handled the strike for the Central Labor Union, is expected to make an exhaustive report at tomorrow's meeting. At that time it is anticipated that the inside story of the negotiations between the heads of the police union and city and State authorities will be revealed.

The main features of the lengthy report of the Mayor's committee are as follows:

1—The policemen are condemned for their action, the strike being declared "absolutely unjustifiable."

2—It declares that Commissioner Curtis refused to adopt the committee's plan by which the policemen would have voluntarily surrendered their A. F. of L. charter.

3—That Curtis, when urged by the Mayor, refused to call for the State Guard on the eve of the strike, saying he had the situation completely in hand.

4—Herbert Parker, special counsel for Curtis, is censured for keeping the committee's message from the commissioner.

5—Commissioner Curtis is scored for his hasty action in punishing the union police leaders before allowing time to adjust the difficulty.

BROOKLINE'S TWO PAPERS IN MERGER

Brookline's two newspapers, the Chronicle and the Townsman, have merged, and will be published as a single paper under one management. The merger follows the reorganization of the Chronicle, effected last month. Walter D. Allen, managing editor of the Townsman, becomes treasurer and general manager of the Chronicle Company. Walter C. Bingham, former treasurer of the Chronicle, becomes president of the corporation, and Charles A. W. Spencer, for forty years connected with the Chronicle, is vice-president and managing editor of the paper, now officially known as "The Chronicle-Townsman, incorporating the Brookline Townsman."

CAPT. R. D. SKINNER GIVEN DECORATION

Captain R. Dana Skinner of Cambridge and Manchester, Harvard '15, was decorated by Major-General Clarence R. Edwards with the Legion of Honor (Chevalier). He was assistant to the chief of the American Air Service in Paris, in special charge of the contact with the French Ministry of Aeronautics. Major Michael J. Moore read the citation. General Edwards congratulated the captain and his family, who were present, and kissed his two four-year-old twins, Henrietta and Eleanor Skinner. Captain Skinner is now in business in New York city.

KING ALBERT SEES WORLD'S RICHEST CITY FROM NAVAL PLANE

HALF HOUR TRIP OVER NEW YORK

Belgian Ruler Also Visits Wall Street and the Woolworth Building

By International News Service.

New York, Oct. 4.—King Albert of Belgium got a "bird's-eye view" of New York today, when he flew over the city for half an hour in a naval hydro-airplane.

Quietly leaving the Waldorf-Astoria, accompanied by a few officials, the King boarded the flying boat at the Columbia Yacht Club Pier at North River and 86th street. Then for thirty minutes the big craft cruised above the city, while the King with a pair of binoculars watched the great sight beneath.

The weather was cloudy, but a good view was obtained.

Following the sky jaunt the King was taken to Wall street, where the brokers gave him a noisy ovation.

Upon his arrival at the Stock Exchange the King was met by the board of governors, and escorted to a seat in the gallery, where he could see the bulls and bears in action. For the time being the brokers lost all interest in "steel common" and kindred subjects, and stopped to cheer the royal visitors.

Afterwards the King was taken to the tower of the Woolworth Building, the highest office building in the world. He expressed his admiration for the wonderful panoramic view spread out before him, and asked numerous questions about the names of various streets and buildings and bridges.

In the meanwhile, Queen Elizabeth was visiting hospitals and the Rockefeller Institute, accompanied by Mrs. Hylan, wife of the Mayor; Baroness Decartier de Marchienne, wife of the Belgian Ambassador, and official members of the royal party. She was especially delighted with the improved methods of treating children's ailments and frequently expressed the hope that they would be introduced among her own people.

Both the King and Queen were recipients of many expressions of disappointment over the fact that their official tour of the country had been cancelled because of President Wilson's illness.

King Albert's Visit to Boston Shortened, Due to Illness of Wilson

Preparations for the visit to Boston of King Albert and Queen Elizabeth of Belgium, one of the few cities in the East to which they will go, were completed today.

Because of the illness of President Wilson, the King has cancelled a large part of his program, and the visit of the royal party to this city will be brief.

The special train, carrying the party, is scheduled to arrive at the South Station at 7:30 tomorrow morning, where it will be met by the Mayor's reception committee.

WELCOME BY MAYOR.

The official welcome by the Mayor and others will take place at 8:30, and ten minutes later the party will leave the station for the Copley-Plaza in automobiles.

Because of the exceedingly short stay, the King will be visible to the majority of people only while traveling from one place to another. In sequence open automobiles will be used, rather than trains.

The party will leave the hotel at 9:40 and proceed to the Holy Cross Cathedral, where a pontifical mass will be solemnized at 10 o'clock. At the conclusion of the services, the King and Queen with their suite, will return to the Copley-Plaza, where lunch will be served at 1.

RECEPTION AT COPLEY-PLAZA.

At 2:30 there will be a private reception in the hotel, at which the King will receive the Significrise of nation, State, city and church, and at 3:45 will leave for Harvard University.

President A. Lawrence Lowell will give a reception to the royal party at 4:15, after which they will journey to the home of Lars Anderson, where tea will be served.

At 6:15 the party returns to the hotel, and at seven is scheduled to start for the South Station, where the royal train leaves for Niagara Falls at 7:30.

ALL STATES TO CONFER ON FOOD

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 4.—Commissioner of Foods and Markets Eugene H. KHEDIVE'S SON ELOPES WITH PRINCESS

Scion of Egypt's Ruler and Maria di Brizna of Italy Wed in Secret

Paris, Oct. 4.—International aristocracy is deeply stirred by the news of the elopement of Said Halim, the Egyptian royal prince, and Princess Marie Caracciele di Brizna, scion of a leading Neapolitan family.

The marriage of the couple was arranged a few months ago, when the Prince returned from the French front, where he had served as a cavalry officer with the British army. But in the eleventh hour the Khedive's family objected to it on the ground that it was a "mesalliance," the Princess not being of royal blood, so young Halim decided to take recourse to "strong arm" methods.

ASSEMBLES COSTLY TROUSSEAU.

While his fiancee's family was summering at Piesole, near Florence, the Prince assembled a sumptuous trousseau in the principal shops of Italy, then purchased a high powered auto.

Wednesday night, with the machine's motor purring in the thick of the famous Piesole woods, the Prince, disguised as a chauffeur, lifted the maid of the Princess and together they helped the bride-to-be out of a second story window of the Hotel Aurora, then at a tremendous rate of speed they made off in the big car for an unknown destination.

The whole Italian police is searching for the couple but so far has failed to find any trace of them. At the special demand of the Egyptian Khedive, the Italian frontiers are closely watched for the elopers.

$2,000,000 YEARLY INCOME.

The prince was born in Cairo, the son of His Royal Highness Mehemid Halim and Princess Elaine de Jalet. His uncle, Prince Halim, was grand vizier—or premier—of Turkey and was famous as the protege of King Louis Philipe of France. His aunt is the sister of the former Khedive Habbas, who was compelled by England to abdicate.

The Prince's income is $2,000,000 a year.

Before eloping, the Prince confidentially told a friend he had decided to break the tradition of royal marriages diplomatically arranged. He says he was "really heartbroken" about the young Neapolitan Princess and intended to renounce his royal privileges and make his home in New York. All Italian and French liners are closely watched. The Prince is a remarkable actor, and it is believed he may successfully assume a disguise and travel second-class with his bride as a common emigrant.

REFUSES WARRANT FOR AUTO DRIVER

The clerk of the Charlestown court refused to grant a warrant for the arrest of George W. Powers, twenty-three, of Sackville street, Charlestown. Powers was driving a machine which knocked down and fatally injured nine-year-old Thomas Furey of No. 74 School street, Charlestown. Witnesses testified that the boy jumped from a wagon directly in front of the automobile.

SARGENT PANELS TO BE UNCOVERED

Two panels of the John S. Sargent Decoration, which have just been completed, will be uncovered at the Public Library Sunday. They are "The Church" and "The Synagogue." The library will be open at noon, but admission by letter will begin at 11 at the Blagden street entrance.

Where to See King Albert

Because of the brief stay tomorrow in Boston of King Albert and Queen Elizabeth, the majority of the Bostonians will be able to see them only while en route from one objective to another. Open automobiles will be used, and those wishing to see the King should look for him at the following times and places:

8:40—South Station to hotel, Summer, Winter, Tremont, Park, Beacon and Arlington streets, Commonwealth avenue, Dartmouth street, Copley square.

9:40—To cathedral, Huntington avenue, West Newton and Washington streets.

11:30 — Return. Washington, Union Park, Montgomery and Dartmouth streets.

3:45 p. m.—To Harvard University by way of Huntington avenue, Clarendon street, Commonwealth and Massachusetts avenues.

5 p. m.—To Weld Farm by way of Massachusetts avenue, Boylston street, Charles River Parkway, Cottage Farm bridge, Essex, Ivy, Carlton and Colchester streets, Longwood avenue, Riverway, Jamaicaway, Pond street.

6:15 p. m.—Return to hotel, Pond street, Jamaicaway, Riverway, Fenway, Charlesgate West, Commonwealth avenue, Dartmouth street.

7 p. m.—To South Station by way of Huntington avenue, Boylston, Tremont, Winter and Summer streets.

EVERETT BOY WANTS TO BE SINGLE AGAIN

Charges Girl Wife With Making False Statements in Getting License

Joseph L. Manley of Everett, a minor, has begun suit in the Superior Court at East Cambridge to annul his marriage to Helen J. Flynn of Malden. Manley petitions through his father, Joseph C. Manley. He alleges that on March 5 she applied at Malden City Hall for a license to marry him. He claims she made false statements regarding his age and residence. She was married the same day in Boston, and he says that at the time he was not of age and did not have the consent of his parents.

Mary E. Welsa of Lowell asks that her marriage to Horace E. Emery of Lowell be annulled. They were married in Lowell December 15, 1917. She alleges that at time he had a wife from whom he had not been divorced.

Mrs. Eva M. Rankin of Somerville files a suit for divorce against Caleb Rankin of Medford. She alleges non-support, cruel treatment and intoxication. She asks for the custody of a minor child.

Mrs. Jennie Sprague of Cambridge sues Charles Sprague of Watertown, charging cruel treatment, non-support and desertion.

Mrs. Mary V. Eldridge of Watertown charges William D. Eldridge of Cambridge with cruel treatment, non-support and intoxication. She seeks the custody of four children.

Mrs. Louise E. McCrory of Melrose files a suit against Winfield McCrory, alleging cruel treatment, and seeks the custody of two children.

HARVARD'S FUND IN BOSTON NEAR $1,000,000

Team Workers Start Out to Round Up 10,000 of College Alumni

Boston's figures for the Harvard Endowment Fund stood at $978,849 today, according to a statement from headquarters, No. 85 Milk street. The report showed an increase of $52,849 over yesterday.

Needing gifts amounting to only $21,451 to reach the $1,000,000 which they had set as their week-end goal, members of occupational group teams in Boston started out prepared to ignore the customary Saturday half-holiday.

They planned to combine business with pleasure in going to their clubs and week-end gatherings where other Harvard Alumni were known to be.

RESTS WITH ALUMNI.

The burden of the raising of the fund, the directors realize, remains with the team members calling upon the alumni. Upon these graduates rests the burden of the effort to secure 100 per cent. in gifts, that is a subscription large or small, from every one of the more than 10,000 Harvard alumni living in Boston, Norfolk, Suffolk and the southern half of Middlesex Counties.

Reports of teams early this morning showed that in point of subscription, the educators and the members of the mercantile fields are tied for honors.

Next in order come the teams of manufacturing, lawyers, doctors and publications, with architects, insurance, financial, ministers and younger graduate's teams running about even.

SUGGESTS A SLOGAN.

Although the Harvard men have been conducting their activities for the fund of $15,250,000 without any slogan, one man calls attention to the inscription on the northern facade of the public library.

"The Commonwealth requires the education of its citizens as a safeguard of order and liberty."

ORDER OF MOOSE SESSIONS CLOSE

The Supreme Council of the Loyal Order of Moose has concluded its sessions at the Copley-Plaza Hotel. The Supreme Officers and Council were entertained at the Moose Home, No. 82 Newbury street, Boston, where a campaign for 5,000 members for Boston Lodge No. 24 was launched. Supreme Prelate and Dictator of Boston Lodge James F. Griffin presided.

HARVARD ENROLLMENT HAS REACHED 5,017

The enrollment at Harvard University has reached 5,017. Of this number 2,504 are members of the college proper, about sixty less than the record registration of three years ago. The graduate school of business administration shows a record-breaking attendance of 346 which is nearly 60 per cent. larger than any enrollment, since its establishment twelve years ago.

The law school has a phenomenal first-year class of 486.

JEWS PRAY FOR RECOVERY OF PRESIDENT

Concern for Wilson's Health One of Features of the Day of Atonement

Prayers for the speedy restoration to health of President Wilson were offered in synagogues throughout Boston.

In almost every Jewish office rabbis either led the congregations in prayers for those in authority, specifically mentioning the name of the President, or else composed special prayers.

Special prayers were first offered in the Temple Mishkan Tefila on Moreland street, Roxbury, where the congregation was led by Rabbi H. H. Rabinovitz. The rabbi led in some of the oldest psalms, praying for the preservation of "the great among the people."

In the Temple Adath Jeshurun on Blue Hill avenue, Rabbi Henry Raphael Gold also offered special prayers for the President.

The services of Yom Kippur began on the eve of the day of the long fast at Temple Israel, Commonwealth avenue, many were turned away for lack of room. Rabbi Harry Levi conducted the services. Henry L. Levi, the choirmaster, was in charge of the temple quartet and an augmented choir.

At Temple Ohabai Shalom at Union Park street, Rabbi Goodman A. Rose of New York was in charge. He was assisted by Rev. E. Wolkowich.

In all the temples and synagogues the Day of Atonement was ushered in by the singing of the solemn old chant "Kol Nidre."

It was learned today that the Congregation Mishkan Tefila has decided to extend its services to Brookline, where services will be held in Whitney Hall.

Congregation of Adath Jeshurun Sets Record in $200,000 Building Fund

The congregation of the Adath Jeshurun Synagogue are completing one of the quickest campaigns on record for the raising of a large sum of money for a charitable work. With a contemplated $200,000 building, $100,000 has already been subscribed and $20,000 more has been pledged.

Much of the credit is due to the dramatic appeal by Rabbi H. Raphael Gold, who in his sermon touched on the past glories of the Jewish race and told of the sufferings undergone by those left in Palestine. His flock was greatly moved, and with a spirit of generosity seldom equaled, raised the largest amount ever taken in at one gathering.

Taking for his topic, "The Breath of Little Innocence that Animates the World," he sent a freshing zephyr blowing from the City of Boston, who recently have heard from members of the Legion returning from Palestine, tales of cruelties practiced on their brethren in the East.

Rejection of this as "the age of rationalism," he stated that intellectual development is necessary, and that the Jewish youth must be a potent factor in the service of his nation and his people.

"Jewish learning has been transferred from Russia," he said, "therefore once Jewish learning radiated."

"America," he continued, "can best serve Israel. It is here in Boston, with a community of 72,000 Jews, that provision must be made for the youth, by furnishing the indispensable things, which serve for a better development of the physical and intellectual needs of our people."

FREE SCHOLARSHIP IN SINGING OFFERED

A free scholarship in the vocal normal department of the New England Conservatory of Music is offered to a young man or young woman of limited means and naturally good voice. A competitive examination for this scholarship will be held at the Conservatory, Huntington avenue and Gainsborough streets, on Tuesday afternoon, October 7, from 2 to 5 o'clock.

Wants Allied Police Force Sent Into Hungary

Paris, Oct. 4.—Le Matin prints the following special cable dispatch.

By ERNEST GARAMY

(Leader of the Hungarian Socialists.)

Budapest, Oct. 2.—I have today written to Premier Clemenceau asking him to order the occupation of Hungary by an interallied police force to be commanded by a French, American, or English officer, in order to prevent the disturbances that are likely to occur owing to the doubling of the population of Budapest, the lack of coal and raw materials, and the excessive requisitions made by the Rumanians, which have caused general unemployment.

We have plenty of natural resources in it will be seen that our policy harmonizes with the Allies' idea of world peace, but it must be realized that we must have a reasonable government which moderates the passions of the masses, especially with regard to anti-Semitism.

RECORD SALES RUSH ARMY STORES

More Clerks to Be Added and Gates Put Up to Keep Crowd In Order

Attendance at the Army Retail Stores in South Boston continues to increase, according to Colonel E. G. Glasgow. Friday's receipts were $15,170.70, the highest so far, he said. One hundred persons have been added to the personnel to care for the increase in customers, and more will be added next week.

Because of the disposition on the part of the public to "jam" the stores, control gates will be installed which will regulate the influx of people. Children with carts hereafter will be forced to use the automobile gate.

Lieutenant-Colonel H. H. Barry, in charge of the mail order department, said that 40,000 orders had been received to date, and that the department was only 6 or 7 days behind. Assisted by Miss E. J. Horrigan, Colonel Barry expects to catch up with the orders by the end of the week.

Colonel Barry stated emphatically that there was no friction between his department and the postoffice in handling mail orders. He said the postoffice was delivering parcels as fast as they were turned over to them.

GUERRILLA WAR STARTED BY NEGROES

Helena, Ark., Oct. 4.—A negro insurrection, and not an ordinary riot was prematurely started when authorities arrested Frank Moore, negro, Tuesday night, precipitating guerrilla war in the canebrake section of Phillips County where, so far it has resulted in the death of four white men and fourteen negroes, according to information in the hands of Federal investigators here today.

Three soldiers have been seriously wounded in a fight northwest of Elaine.

Twenty-five negroes are reported surrounded by soldiers near Modoc, and a battle is expected before the blacks are arrested.

Federal investigators are said to have found literature indicating a negro uprising was planned October 17. At present, they declare, quiet throughout the county declare that more guns and ammunition were bought by negroes there last month than in any other like period.

WOMEN TO ATTEND LEGION CONVENTION

Two men and twelve women delegates will be sent to the State convention of the American Legion at Worcester October 15, from the New England women's post of the legion, No. 79, of which Mrs. Daisy Pratt Eddy is president. Miss Ruth Dutton, Battery C, 101st Field Artillery, will be the leader of the delegation with Chaplain Albert Parker of the Hingham Training School as second. The following are the women delegates: Mrs. Anna McNulty, Misses Catherine Parker, Marie Eddy, Maud Joyce, Stella Sutherland, Mrs. Lila Lane, Mrs. H. Lee Bowen, Mrs. Alice Doherty, Miss Julia Eagan, Miss Ella Gray, Mrs. Lilly McIntire and Miss Dutton.

BAKER SHOCKED BY GENERAL'S MURDER

Washington Oct. 4.—The War Department was called upon today for action in an effort to investigate a report that Brigadier-General Edgar Jadwin, Morgan's chief of the commission to Russia, had been captured and killed by Bolsheviki.

General Jadwin was a personal friend of Secretary of War Baker and it is understood he was shocked by the report of his death. He is known to have been en route to Kief with a British officer and a Russian officer, Ukranian, which is thought to apply to him although the two entente generals had been killed.

WILL BRING HOME SOLDIERS' BODIES

Washington, Oct. 4.—Approximately 1,000 American soldiers, who met death abroad in countries other than France, will be returned to the United States for burial as soon as possible, it was announced by Secretary of War Baker.

The chief countries in which the bodies will be disinterred are Great Britain, Germany, Luxemburg, Belgium, Italy and northern Russia.

CHARGES 'SPIES' PROWL ABOUT HER HOME

Mrs. Margaret Freeman, Now at East Dennis, Thinks Men Are Husband's Agents

Mrs. Margaret Reed Freeman, who has a suit for divorce pending in the Suffolk Superior Court, against her husband, Ernest R. Freeman, treasurer and general manager of the H. F. Shurtleff Shower Works at Readville, has applied for an order restraining annoyance from persons she believes to be in the employ of her husband. She has gone from her summer home at East Dennis day and night. They come upon the piazza of the house in the night, she declares, peer in doors and windows, and keep her in fear.

The grounds for Mrs. Freeman's suit are cruel treatment.

The Freemans were married at Worcester on January 14, 1903, and have always lived at Dedham and Hyde Park. They have four children, Sally, fifteen; Ruth, fourteen, Barbara, six, and Reed, five.

Freeman recently applied to the court for the custody of the children, but Judge Hammond decided they should remain with their mother in view of the fact that the divorce petition is to be heard at the session beginning on Monday next.

Mrs. Freeman is now at East Dennis, in a sparsely settled neighborhood. Her husband still lives at the Hyde Park home, although counsel for Mrs. Freeman notified him to quit the premises not later than August 30.

TO OBSERVE FIRE PREVENTION DAY

Plans have been made for the observance of Fire Prevention Day next Thursday. Wednesday evening there will be a demonstration of the water curtain at Filene's store, and an exhibition by members of the Fire Department. Addresses in various schools by Colonel Chase, representing General Parker, will head a motor apparatus parade which will end at Scollay Square. Lieutenant-Governor Coolidge, Mayor Peters and Fire Commissioner Murphy will speak at the Union.

QUINCY QUARRYMEN ACCEPT WAGE AWARD

Quincy quarry workers have agreed to accept the new wage scale reached through a meeting of the union executive committee and the owners held in Montpelier, Vt., a short time ago. The men had voted to go on strike more than a month. The agreement provides a minimum wage increase of $5 cents an hour.

MARY G. MONAHAN OF WEYMOUTH, BRIDE

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Mary Gertrude Monahan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Monahan of 87 North street, Weymouth, to Martin Griffin of West Quincy. The ceremony was performed in the Sacred Heart Church, with Rev. Cornelius J. Reardon officiating. The bridesmaid was Miss Agnes Monahan, a sister of the bride.

JEWELERS SUE GIRL FOR DIAMOND RING

Lena Piel of Malden is named as defendant in a writ of equity filed in the Suffolk Superior Court by Glaser Brothers of No. 319 Hanover street, who claim that she has a diamond ring valued at $325, which belongs to them.

They say that Morris Pugach of Porter street, Malden, bought the ring of them, paying $5 on account and then gave it to the young woman.

INCORPORATE NEW MOTOR SALES FIRM

The Northway Motor Sales Company, which manufactures and sells motor trucks, has been incorporated under the laws of Massachusetts with a capital of $100,000. The incorporators are Eli J. Stickle and Frank Schindewolf of Kenton, O., Mead B. Northway of New City, N. Y., and James F. Cavanaugh of Everett, James F. Finneran of Everett, Philip J. Benjamin of Arlington and John C. Reilly of Boston.

BEN ROGERS COMES HERE AS MANAGER

Ben Rogers of Washington, formerly manager of the Fox Film Exchange in that city, began his duties this week as manager of the Select Pictures Corporation with offices at 31 Church street.

Mr. Rogers succeeds David J. Seiz, who with his wife and daughter, Miss Ruth Seiz, left for Australia. He is well known among New England film men.

ENGLISH LORD TO ADDRESS CHAMBER

Lord Leverhulme, the "Soap King" of England, will be the guest at a Chamber of Commerce luncheon, November 25. He is founder and chairman of Lever Brothers, Ltd., of Port Sunlight, the famous model town. He has recently introduced the six-hour day into his factories and has called a conference to discuss "Facing the Facts of Human Relationships in Industry."

D. S. CROSS PINNED UPON TWO MARINES

Captain Julian P. Brown of Belmont, attached to the Marine Corps at the Charlestown Navy Yard, and Gunnery Sergeant Harry T. Horne of the same corps were decorated with the Distinguished Service Cross.

Colonel Melville J. Shaw, commanding officer of the marines, pinned the cross on each of the recipients.

ANGRY TENANTS TO GET OUT IN BODY

Decide on One Grand Moving Day as Protest Against New Rents at oHtel Harvard

Occupants of the Hotel Harvard, Huntington avenue, whose rents have been raised, beginning October 1, anywhere from $4 to $10 per unit, have lodged protests with General Sherburne's committee on the cost of living. A committee of the tenants announces that after a meeting of all those interested it has been decided to move, en masse, leaving the Hotel Harvard almost uninhabited.

This they will do, so the committee points out, as a protest against what seems to them extortionate rentals.

Israel Nossos, of No. 101 Tremont street, is the owner. The rates increased with the present and the former price are as follows:

	Rent Now	Rent Formerly

Suite 101	$20	$10

This increase makes a total weekly income of $453, the committee of the tenants points out. The old rate was $294. This shows, as the tenants conclude, that landlord Nossos rent roll has increased, by the October rates, almost 22 per cent.

At General Sherburne's office at the State House it was announced that complaints had been lodged, recently, by rent profiteering chiefs and by Israel Nossos, and that investigation would be made.

NARROW GAUGE ROAD ASKS 10-CENT FARE

A new tariff has been filed by the officials of the Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn Railroad with the Public Service Commission, fixing the fare at 10 cents to and from Wonderland and 20 cents to and from Lynn. The present fare is 7 and 14 cents, respectively.

Twenty-ride commutation tickets will be sold for $4.70, each ride being good for a 10-cent fare. High school pupils only will be stationed in Winthrop and Revere, may buy tickets at 10 rides for 50 cents. The new tariff goes into effect November 2.

AUSTRIA COULD HAVE AVERTED WAR, SAYS TIRPITZ

INSISTS THAT GERMANY WAS UNPREPARED TO FIGHT

VON TIRPITZ MEMOIRS
By ALFRED VON TIRPITZ,
Grand Admiral of the German Navy.

From the standpoint of Germany, when war first loomed, because of Austrian ultimatum to Serbia, any military invasion of Serbia by Austria should have been swift and impressive. Only in that way could a result be achieved by which the following negotiations could be more readily inaugurated after a pledge from Serbia had been obtained. For any advance at all was fraught with far greater danger than the originators of the idea considered probable at that time.

On July 25, 1914, Serbia accepted the demands of the Austrian ultimatum in the main, and declared her readiness to negotiate the rest. How far England, Russia, France and Italy helped Austria to her certain diplomatic success by their pressure upon Belgrade, I do not know. At any rate, it cannot be denied that the reply of Serbia showed an unexpected compliance and I do not think that the Austrian government showed the right sense of proportion when it declared this reply unacceptable as a basis for further negotiations.

The real reason for this attitude was that Count Berchtold and Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg did not grasp the tangibility of the diplomatic success which had already been achieved. Serbia had been saved, and as Bethmann Hollweg was endeavoring to prevent a European war, the danger of war could in all probability have been regarded as averted if Austria only had been satisfied. She could have given to the Serbs a short space of time for the negotiations of the other demands, even if international supervision had been imposed.

The whole affair could have been given the appearance of the humiliation of Serbia accomplished with England's consent. Germany's diplomatic victory would have been complete and the world war would have been diverted.

In the light of experiences of the world war, the argument might now be brought forward whether Germany should not have come to an expedient understanding with her neighbor providing for the dividing up of the Austro-Hungarian empire. It may be advanced that this would have been better materially for Germany.

However, in so far as he was actuated by the principles of historical development and loyalty, and was influenced by the inviolability of the dual monarchy and the often demonstrated capacity of the House of Hapsburg for alliances to Germany's benefit, so their allies, Bethmann-Hollweg was right. Having taken this view, it was necessary that Germany support Austria in demanding adequate reparation. Only thus could Austria be made a serviceable member of the triple alliance and her inner decay arrested.

The mistake in Berlin and Vienna was made in the manner of carrying out the plans. Bethmann and Berchtold, in spite of the warnings of Count Tisza, were unable to conceive that sufficient reparation might be obtained otherwise than by military force on the part of the Austrians.

BERLIN'S DUAL AIM.

Consequently, from the beginning, Berlin clung to the double aim of urging on hesitant Austria to prompt and energetic action on the one hand, and of "localizing" the conflict on the other.

In case the Serbian answer was unsatisfactory, as was expected, Austria was to immediately appear before marching into Serbia, and Bulgaria was to be allowed to take part in the military operations. At the same time everything possible was to be done to prevent the spread of this circumscribed Balkan war.

I have already described how the Berlin Foreign Office was aware of the fact that the entente had urged Belgrade to yield and how on July 25, 1914, Serbia accepted the Austrian demands in the main and proposed to negotiate certain clauses. Even in the face of this Bethmann-Hollweg persisted in the fanciful dream that he could accomplish the entente fight over the Serbian question.

At this time I was in Tarasp. My immediate wish was to return to Berlin, but the Chancellor, over the telephone, requested me to remain where I was on the grounds that my return to duty would only make the situation more acute. I knew that to return without authority would not do at that time, and despite my instinctive feeling that the situation was more acute than those in power suspected, and my fears that slumbering England might be aroused to a desire for war, I remained at Tarasp for a few days longer. My information regarding developments came chiefly through the Foreign Office, whose reports almost convinced me that no one of the great powers would be willing to take the responsibility of starting a world war.

HAD AVOIDED WAR.

We had for years been accustomed to such periods of tension in Europe, and nothing had ever come from them. Buelow had always remained master of the situation and armed conflict had been avoided. I was the further straining of the situation after the delivery of the ultimatum and especially the news of the return of our fleet to home waters that determined me, on advice from my own bureau, to return to Berlin without orders. I arrived there July 27.

(Editor's Note—Light is shed on this attitude of the Chancellor by the recently published memoirs of Captain von Persius, the German naval expert. He states that at the outbreak of the war there already was a cabal composed of members of the Reichstag and military commanders to overthrow the policies of Von Tirpitz, the latter's annual program not exciting them from financial considerations. Though Tirpitz does not openly say so the inference is drawn that the Chancellor was a party to this.)

I then learned that both Hollweg and Sir Edward Grey had made mediatory proposals. In fairness to the chancellor I must say that although he mismanaged the situation badly, his sincere wish was for peace. He had renewed negotiations with Russia, which had been at a standstill owing to a misunderstanding on the part of Russia, and he had sought to restrain Vienna after the refusal of the Serbian answer, and finally had drawn up a mediatory proposal which defined the military occupation of Serbia as merely a temporary guarantee of the fulfillment of the pledges subscribed to by Serbia.

GERMANY'S ERROR CAUSED WAR.

How then, with so much honest endeavor in the interest of peace, was that peace broken?

War came because of Germany fundamentally erroneous belief in the entente's desire for peace at all costs, particularly in the case of England, which had given rise to the idea that the punishment of Serbia could be made a purely local matter.

The continuance of these false beliefs weakened our diplomacy which was already puerile.

On the day before I reached Berlin, that is to say July 26, 1914, a cable had been received from Sir Edward Grey suggesting that Great Britain, Germany, France and Italy should combine to undertake mediation of the Serbian question. The chancellor failed to recognize the opportunity this offered, just as he had failed to recognize the value of the Serbian answer.

To be sure, caution was necessary in regard to the English conference proposals because experience had shown that Germany was always at a disadvantage in a conference of the powers because of England's maritime supremacy which could always be counted upon to sway the opinions of the other conferees.

At this moment, however, the European "Areopagus" as Bethmann called it, should not have been refused. It presented the only possibility of still avoiding a world war. The Chancellor could have accepted Grey's proposal on the condition that Austria be permitted to exact a pledge from Serbia, to which condition, on July 30, Grey expressed himself willing to accede. Instead of grasping this opportunity, Bethmann-Hollweg's position made it possible for England and to take the stand that he refused to arbitrate on the grounds that it was "beneath the dignity" of Austria to accept the services of the four great powers.

OVER-SENSITIVE TO DIGNITY.

He telegraphed on July 27 to Prince Lichnowsky, then ambassador to Great Britain:

"It is impossible for us in this discussion with Serbia to summon our ally before a European court of justice."

On the same day, according to a report of the Austrian ambassador Warned him against his policy of accepting Grey's proposal for a conference.

Doubtless might be entertained as to the sincerity of Grey's proposal, but such doubts should not have been permitted to cause its refusal. Such a course put us in the position of having refused to mediate. The secondary mistake in Berlin of refusing the conference was just as great as the primary one of relying too much on the disinclination of the entente to go to war. Bethmann proved oversensitive as to the dignity of the Austro-Hungarian state which was not identical with the German Empire, but to whose future the policy of the Chancellor chained us for life or death.

Despite her activity in the matter, the Chancellor insisted that Germany was at all vitally interested in the Serbian question and Von Jagow pretended to take no little interest. In it that on July 27 he declared to the French ambassador that he had not yet found time to read Serbia's answer to Austria. Such a thing was a momentous diplomatic blunder coming at such a crisis.

There was nothing wrong in our support of the Austrian cause, open as it was. Our mistake was in refusing the entente offer of a conference even though we might have instructed it. Our policies could not but show the entente statesmen that our diplomats were partly indifferent, partly too credulous. When we avoided an opportunity to avoid war, at the same time dealing our decision for peace and persisting in our invasion policy, we gave them the opportunity to accuse us of causing the war. It made it possible for our enemies to bring against us the grave charge that we instigated the war—the charge that has done us immeasurable harm.

The truth is that we had some excuse for our refusal of entente proposals because the mediatory policy of the entente had occasionally caused serious alarm in Germany because it showed obvious traits of a conspiracy. Since the close of 1912 it had been obvious that to Serbia was assigned the role in the movement of the Balkans to begin the dividing up of the Hapsburg monarchy when the hour should strike.

Already in 1913 Austria had considered the advisability of stamping out the spark before it could burst into a flame, but was dissuaded from doing so by Italy and Germany.

We also were aware of occasional Russian expressions that "war might be expected in 1916." One therefore occasionally heard from half informed, irresponsible Germans, but only from such, the expression, "If the war has to come, the sooner the better."

In the face of the growing strength of the Russian war party, the threats of war in 1916 were not to be taken lightly. In fact, during the last week of July this party took advantage of the general confusion to set all of Russia aflame. A war against Russia could not have been justified even though our object was to prevent a general European conflagration, but we should have been on our guard. Also we should have been ever prepared against England, and above all against France.

If the British Lion since 1912 had crouched more and more, we should always have remembered that it was perhaps a crouch in preparation for a spring, and we should not have given him the excuse to spring. Our suspicions should not have prevented our participation in a genuine conference of the powers.

Up to the treaty of 1914 the entente powers were only loosely linked and a peaceful solution of the encircling policy seemed probable in the case of England's unwillingness to run a risk if Germany were at the same time courageous and courteous, ever prepared for war, but avoiding all provocation that would have given her enemies an excuse for attacking her.

SAYS GERMANY UNPREPARED.

The fiction that we systematically worked to bring about war is absurd in the light of our unpreparedness. Had the Chancellor asked me regarding our preparedness before committing the nation to war, I should have been obliged to tell him that from a naval standpoint the moment was strategically unfavorable.

Our dreadnought building program, which was doubling the striking power of our navy, had only been in operation four years, the Kiel Canal was unfinished. The fleet could not reach its maximum pitch before 1920.

As late as 1914 we had imported vast supplies of bread stuffs into France.

We were short of saltpetre and other supplies which meant the very life of the army.

Our strength lay ahead of us, while France and England, especially the former, had reached the pinnacle of their power. France could then scarcely bear the burden of her armament, to say nothing of any increase in the future.

Therefore, even could we desire war eventually, it was to our greatest interest to stave it off for the present.

DOCTORS PREPARE TO FIGHT GRIP

Expect Renewed Outbreak of Epidemic This Fall

Medical authorities agree that there is great likelihood of another grip epidemic during the next few months. They say that in the past serious epidemics of grip have usually prepared themselves for three and sometimes four years, and they fully expect that last year's scourge will again make itself felt in all sections of the country. Every effort is being made by health authorities to combat the danger.

It is a public duty to see that every member of the family is put into the best possible physical condition to fight off an attack of grip. For this purpose no better family food can be used than Father John's Medicine, which is all pure and wholesome nutriment and which builds up new resisting power.

However slight a cold may appear when it first develops, it should not be neglected. It is important to remember that Father John's Medicine has been in use for more than sixty years in homes and hospitals throughout the country for colds and as a tonic body-builder. By soothing and healing the mucous lining of the breathing passages gives relief from irritating coughs, its pure food elements make new flesh and strength. Remember, Father John's Medicine is guaranteed free from alcohol or dangerous drugs.

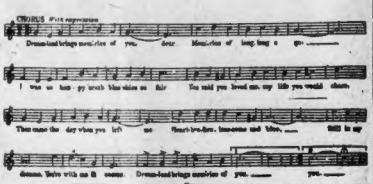
NEW WALTZ SONG GAINS INSTANT POPULARITY

Dreamland Brings Mem'ries Of You



CHORUS
Dreamland brings mem'ries of you,
I was so hap - py with You when we
You said you loved me, my life you would share,
Then came the day when you left me
Dreamland brings mem'ries of you,

With the return of the dance craze which is fast spreading throughout the country, the waltz has again come to the fore, and is today more popular than ever. The old-fashioned lilting rhythm danced by our mothers and which was a great favorite until the advent of the fox trot and one step, is now in great demand wherever dance music is played. At private functions and cabarets the new waltz song is always in evidence.

There are many reasons advanced for the return to popularity of the waltz. Some believe it to be a psychological change brought by the war.

RECALLS OLD SUCCESSES.

One prominent publisher of songs attributes it to the fact that the present day effort of the composer of popular songs has reached a much higher standard and has produced a waltz of more sentimental appeal and sweeter music. This may be said of "Dreamland Brings Mem'ries of You," the new waltz song which has already won great success. "Dreamland Brings Mem'ries of You" is of the ballad type with a wholesome melody that recalls the great successes of the days gone by. It tells a story familiar to all and carries with it a sentiment that will make it live.

There is the love theme that touches the heart. Although it has scored as a ballad, the waltz version of "Dreamland Brings Mem'ries of You" is a distinct hit. It possesses a fascinating rhythm, one of those contagious melodies that one sings, whistles and dances to.

WORDS BY A WOMAN.

Ernie Erdman, the composer of a score of successes, and Silas Cella Tomkins, a newcomer as a song writer, are responsible for this latest hit.

They have realized that the public demand is for popular songs of a higher class than heretofore. They have met this demand with a song that overshadows those of a similar type that would have been accepted before the war, but which nowadays would find it difficult to induce a publisher to present for public approval.

Below are the words of the first verse and chorus. The music forms a haunting accompaniment:

Dreams tonight are taking me back to the days of yore—
Days of love that used to be, in dreamland I live them once more;
When the twilight shadows fall,
I feel as though you're near.

Dreams I know will soon recall our love days, that held so much cheer.

Dreamland brings mem'ries of you,
dear, mem'ries of long ago.

I was so happy 'neath blue skies
so fair;

You said you loved me, my life you would share.

Heartbroken, lonesome and blue,
Still in my dreams, you're with me,
it seems,

Dreamland brings mem'ries of you.

Towne Writes Lyrics

Charles Hanson Towne, the poet, has written the lyrics for "Fair Helen," a adaptation of Offenbach's "Belle Helene," to be given here next season, under the direction of Richard Ordynski of the Metropolitan Opera House. The adaptation is by Justin Strong, author of "Three Wise Fools" and other plays.

AN UNSOLICITED COMMENDATION FROM A FAMOUS WAR CORRESPONDENT

INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE
WORLD BUILDING, NEW YORK
Boston, Mass., Sept. 22, 1919.

Mr. Joseph A. Di Pesa,
Press Agent, Park Square Theatre,
Boston, Mass.

Dear Joe:—

It must be a pinch to be advance man for "Buddies." It is its own best little press agent—a natural success and wonderfully so. I sense across hundreds of billets back of the lines which were exact counterparts of that depicted in the Robert comedy a story and scenery revived overseas days after roughing it along the Western Front close to eighteen months. I resolved to cut all our books and war plays, but like all loyal Bostonians, I felt that I could not afford to miss anything in which Donald Brian was appearing. I never saw Don in a finer fettle. Wallace Eddinger is as droll as they come these days, and Peggy Wood sure can act and sing "Buddies" makes a strong appeal to anyone who was mixed up in the "Big Fuss"—I came away refreshed. It is irresistibly good.

Cordially,
Bert Ford.

SAYS IRISH SONG IS INSPIRING

"Among the patriotic songs of the world, which stir the blood, I rank 'Let Erin Remember,'" declares John O'Sullivan. "The Wearing of the Green' is very wonderful verse, but the melody is rather too much like a jig to be inspiring.

"'Let Erin Remember' is usually misinterpreted by singers. They sing it as a plaintive lament. It is nothing of the sort, it is a great battle song, a challenge of the men of today to equal the deeds of their fathers.

"It should be sung in the same tempo as the Marseillaise, each note strongly sung and the cadence well kept. What thrilling words are those written to this ancient air by Thomas Moore!

"'Let Erin remember the day of old
Ere faithless sons betrayed her,
When Malachi wore the collar of gold
Which he won from her proud invader;
When her kings with standard of green unfurled
Led the Red Branch Knights to danger,
Ere the Emerald gem of the Western world
Was set in the crown of the stranger.'

"When I sing this song, and I sing it very often, I am filled with love of country. And yet I have heard it sung in a way to make old women weep instead of raising men to grasp a blade."

Mr. O'Sullivan appears in Symphony Hall October 19 for the benefit of the Employment Bureau, Legion of Allied Veterans.

HOWARD ATHENAEUM

Tom Howard will be seen at the Howard Athenaeum beginning Monday with the "Kewpie Dolls" burlesque, in two acts, entitled, "Two Wise Fools." George Hart as Mike Casey, Anna Caolan, Edythe Lyons, Lew Danny, Mike Fertig, Sydia Dunn and Harriet Berg are in the cast. The scenery, costumes and 6 famous Kewpie Doll chorus are special features. Apart from the burlesque the bill includes Roy and Arthur Jugglers; Heagney and McDermott, with original songs; Moran and King, black face comedians, and the Howardscope, offering Earle Williams in "A Rogue's Romance."

TREMONT TEMPLE

Mary Pickford still reigns supreme at Tremont Temple in "Daddy Long Legs," appearing twice daily. Mistress Mary has surpassed even the sky-high expectations of her most ardent admirers, this being her eighteenth week. This little lady, best beloved star in America, portrays the joys and woes of childhood as no one else can do.

Colonel Arthur Lynch, soldier, poet, writer and statesman, and one of the most picturesque of the world's great Irishmen, will give a lecture on "The Irish Question" at Tremont Temple Tuesday evening, October 21. Colonel Lynch became internationally famous through his exploits in the Boer War.

OPENING SYMPHONY PROGRAM

For the first pair of concerts of the regular Boston Symphony Orchestra season in Symphony Hall, next Friday afternoon and Saturday evening, there Montaux, the new conductor, has chosen the following program:

Beethoven, Second Symphony; Cesar Franck, Symphonic Poem, "The Cursed Huntsman"; Debussy, "Afternoon of a Faun"; Albenis, "Catalonia."

PARK THEATRE

At the Park Theatre on Monday Douglas Fairbanks will begin the third and last week of his engagement in "His Majesty, The American." This is the first time that Mr. Fairbanks has appeared for more than one week consecutively in Boston, and the crowded houses that have greeted him throughout the engagement are ample proof that the public appreciates this, the first production of the United Artists.

WALDRON'S CASINO

Elaborate stage settings and costuming are a feature of the production of Rose Sydell's London Belles, coming to Waldron's Casino. The cast will include Chester ("Rube") Nelson, Lew Rose, George S. Banks, Steve Paul, Nettie Wilson, Hazel Hargis and Martha Richards, with a characteristic Sydell chorus. The program includes the Tasmanian Trio as an extra attraction. Returns from the World Series games are read every afternoon.

BOWDOIN SQ. THEATRE

William Farnum will be seen at the Bowdoin Square Theatre the entire week beginning Monday, in "Wolves of the Night," a story of the great Northwest copper country. The Yatha Weekly, a Harry Lloyd comedy, a continuation of "Smashing Barriers" and five vaudeville acts will complete the bill.

THE STAGE

—By F. J. McIsaac—

FIVE PLAYS TO OPEN HERE MONDAY

With five new attractions making their Boston debut next week, one of them reopening a theatre for the season the local playgoers may well consider strikes and "dark houses" a thing of the past, and the dramatic year is now in full swing. The Hollis Street Theatre, after remaining closed a month later than usual, inaugurates its season with "Moliere," a historical drama featuring Blanche Bates and Henry Miller.

This may be classed as the first "serious" production of the season; a play dependent for entertainment neither on girls and music, nor on bed-room or drawing-room farce. The play, a new one by Philip Moeller has already made a success at the Liberty Theatre in New York.

The central figures are the famous French dramatist and Mme. de Montespan, the brilliant mistress of Louis XIV. Other historical characters introduced are the King himself; Armande, the fickle young wife of Moliere; La Fontaine, the fable writer; La Forest the dramatist's cook to whom he is said to have read all his manuscripts, and various court attaches.

The story is a dramatic one, centering about the love of Mme. de Montespan for Moliere, and the latters discovery of his wife's faithlessness. There is a tempestuous scene twixt Moliere and the King's favorite, in which her love for the dramatist becomes revealed; and the finale is founded on another dramatic incident, true to history.

The interest of the play, however, lies not in any academic faithfulness to fact, but in the dramatic quality of the story and the acting. The setting, reflecting magnificence of the French court of the period, is said to be especially elaborate. There will be no special incidental music, for which the local orchestra is to e augmented. The play is booked for two weeks.

Hero Blames Managers.

From "a budding actor into a blithering idiot." That is the fate of Ralph Hern, and it's all the fault of the managers, so he says. He comes here Monday with "Monte Cristo, Jr." at the Boston Opera House, to show Bostonians just how "blithering" they have made him. Ralph's plaint was made when someone asked him why he became an actor. He maintains he isn't one, though he wanted to be. This is how he tells it:

"I kept threatening to do so, when a manager who shall be nameless (I refer to Charles B. Dillingham), having me under contract and having nothing for me to do, proceeded to put me into a musical comedy. From that time on my doom was sealed. I could neither sing nor dance, and this, as you know, is one of the greatest assets one can possibly have in musical comedy. Some day I hope to play real parts in real plays as a real human being. If that time comes, I am perfectly willing to change my name, to take some strange, weird, unusual sobriquet, such as Smith or Thompson—forget Eton and Cambridge, and be announced as a product of the Bowery. Then fame will be achieved, and with luck I may die penniless."

"Monte Cristo, Jr." is a Winter Garden show, of the calibre and magnificence of "Sinbad." Dumas, they tell us, made a play of his romance which took two nights to run. Messrs. J. J. and Lee Shubert have gone him one better, but condensing their production into two acts, in which there are twenty-two scenes. The work was staged by J. C. Huffman, with words and music by Harold Atteridge, Sigmund Romberg and Jean Schwartz. Besides two hundred Winter Garden houris, the cast includes Ralph Hern, "Chic" Sale, William and Gorsoon Dooley, the Watson Sisters, Adelaide and Hughes, Tom Weitz, Mabel Weeks, Sydney Jarvis, Jack Squires, Esther Walker, Virginia Passinger, Katharine Bailey, Bladys Buckbridge, Muriel Tindal, Nat Wagner, Arthur Cardinal, Eileen Reese, Jack Kearns, Charles Dailey, Mark Fuller Golden, Roger Little and Edith Pierce.

Hampden a Good American.

On the student roll of Harvard College, class of 1900, appears the name, "Walter Hampden Dougherty." This last having been made famous by a brother who was a painter and a father who was a Brooklyn parson, the subject, desiring to make a name for himself, decided to drop the patronymic. It is as Walter Hampden that he comes to the Tremont Theatre next Tuesday afternoon for a two weeks' engagement of "Hamlet" he has played in spasmodic matinees.

Mr. Hampden has been called an English star, perhaps because he first played in England and made his debut as Hamlet there. He is, however, a good American, and wishes to be known as such. He has no confesses to being a Brooklynite. This did not militate against a marked success in New York, where he gave sixty-eight performances in "Hamlet" last season in the theatre between the Booth and the Thirty-ninth Street Theatres.

Mr. Hampden's first American appearance was in the leading role in "The Servant in the House." He has appeared with Nazimova in "The Master Builder," "Ghosts" and "Rosmersholm," and other Ibsen plays; had the leading part in Clyde Fitch's "The City," played Caliban in "The Tempest," and was comedian in "Good Gracious, Annabelle," and "The Calm Camille." He will appear at the Tremont Theatre on Tuesday, Thursday and Friday afternoons and on Saturday mornings.

Audience Helps Leon.

Laughs are boomerangs, says Cecil [illegible] He will show how, on Monday evening, when [illegible] presents "Look Who's Here" [illegible] Theatre for a week [illegible] Mat. Wednesday.

who is starred in the piece with Cleo Mayfield, explained his epigram when someone asked him what fun he got out of his own performances:

"It is your business to make people happy," said this observer, "but where do you come in?"

"My audiences do the same thing for me that I seek to do for them," answered the comedian. "They never laugh without handing me a good laugh, too. I may not show it, but it is there. It takes a great deal to make me laugh. Jokes have become empty to me, and antics make me yawn. But when I see a man or woman enjoying a good hearty laugh that gets right to me the way champagne gets to the head."

In other words, Mr. Lean uses the same prescription for the blues that he used in "The Blue Paradise." The book of the piece tells about an author who writes vivid and realistic love stories, but in doing so forgets to be attentive to his young wife. She gets even, of course—what woman doesn't know how? Besides Cleo Mayfield, others in the cast are Emilie Lea, Joseph Letora, Georgie Mack, William Sellery, Madge Rush, Slivia De Frankie, the McCarthy sisters, John T. Morrissey and others.

Successor to "Peg o' My Heart."

"Seven Miles to Arden," with Grace Valentine in the leading role, will be given for the first time on any stage at the Majestic Theatre Monday evening. The play, an Oliver Morosco production, is by Anna Nichols, author of several plays in which Fiske O'Hara and May Robson have starred. The play is based on the novel of the same name. As may be guessed, it is an Irish comedy, believed by Mr. Morosco to be a natural successor to "Peg o' My Heart."

The story is of Patsy O'Connell, stranded ingenue of the Irish Players, who becomes involved in a little offstage romance of her own. Miss Valentine, who will appear as Patsy, will be remembered as Daisy Mahoney, the mannequin in "Lombardi, Ltd.," another Morosco production. Others in the case will be Warner Baxter, Wallis Clark, Winifred Bryson, Geraldine Muir, Irving Mitchell, Gerald Oliver Smith, John T. Dwyer, William Walcott, George Walcott, Harry Manners, Ernest Pollock, Bernard Cavanaugh and Ernest Warner. The play is in three acts and five scenes. It is with this comedy that Mr. Morosco will open the Little Theatre, New York, which he has recently leased from Winthrop Ames for a term of years.

Craig Players in Shakespeare.

"Potash and Perlmutter" will run for another week at the Arlington Theatre, beginning Monday. With Messrs. Craig and Powell in the two title roles, the play has drawn large audiences, in proof of its perennial popularity and the general good quality of the production. The Craig Players announce a Shakespearian season, to begin on Monday, Oct. 13, when "Romeo and Juliet" will be given the first three days and "Hamlet" the remainder of the week. Miss Mary Young and John Craig will appear in both plays. On Tuesday, Oct. 14, at 3 p. m., Miss Young will give an account of her adventures in France, where she and Mr. Craig did much for the entertainment and welfare of soldiers.

Cohan Comedy Making Hit.

Grant Mitchell in "A Prince There Was" will enter on the third week of his engagement at the Tremont Theatre next Monday evening, where the Cohan "character comedy" is making much the same appeal to grown-ups that Peck's Bad Boy does to children. The play is built around the favorite Cohan theme of galvanizing a weary specimen of the male into activity. It is a comedy first and a fairy tale second, with an excellent cast, which includes Gilda Leary, Ralph Sipperly, Grace Nolan, George Parsons, Ernest Stallard and Wanda Carlyle.

Aspires to Serious Role.

"Lady Macbeth? What's she been doing?" That is what Florence Moore asks in "Breakfast in Bed," Off stage, however, Miss Moore knows the role of Lady Macbeth intimately and aspires—she has just whispered it—to play it sometime. She knows also Juliet and Orphelia. Known as "the funniest girl in the world," she owns to this same secret ambition that many other laugh-creator has harbored—that of one day appearing in a serious role. Many who have laughed at the misadventures of the movie star in "Breakfast in Bed" have been struck by a peculiar richness and appealing quality in Miss Moore's voice, which suggests the suggestion of her appearing in a tragic part does not seem absurd. David Warfield, Miss Moore recalls, began as a low comedian, and her motto appears to be: "What man has done, woman can do."

The farce will enter upon its next-to-last week Monday, with Florence Moore and Leon Gordon still quarrelling over one egg served for two. On October 13, Lew Fields in "A Lonely Romeo."

Has Two Sets of Brains.

It was once said of a famous male dancer that all the brains he had were in his legs. There is a dancer in Boston who has two sets of brains —in his legs and under his hat. His name is Andrew Tombes and he demonstrates at the Wilbur Theatre every night, that there's a great deal besides love in "Nothing But Love." Mr. Tombes has the secret of successful farce—to drop into an absurd situation, and then act as if it were life-or-death. Besides his other gifts, he has a personal charm that cannot be cultivated, but is purely a gift of the gods.

With Ruby Norton, as the blonde heroine, "Nothing But Love", will play its last week at the Wilbur, beginning Monday. It will be succeeded by William Hodge, October 13, in "The Guest of Honor."

An Orthopedic Expert.

Ida May Chadwick, orthopedic expert, has been retained to lecture on shooing and walking. High heels and improper gait, she declares, are the cause of all foot trouble.

"Shoes are being made to sell, not to wear. If you really want to know how to walk, watch some animals running, some children playing, or some athletes." She is too modest to say, "Watch me," but thousands are doing so.

"Some Time" with Frank Tinney enters on its last week here next Monday. The attraction, beginning

SHOWS THAT HOLD OVER—

"SOME TIME," at the Shubert, reminds by its title that there's no time like the present. Last week here.

FLORENCE MOORE and Leon Gordon are still pitching dice for the couch and trying to explain to Benny, in "Breakfast in Bed," at the Plymouth. Last two weeks begin Monday.

"A PRINCE THERE WAS," with Grant Mitchell, at the Tremont, shows that a comedy can bear "heart interest" without being maudlin.

"BUDDIES" will bunk at the Park Square for two weeks more, with Peggy Wood, Wallace Eddinger and Donald Brian to hold the trenches.

"POTASH AND PERLMUTTER," at the Arlington renewed so many old friendships that they will stay another week.

MARY PICKFORD in "Daddy Long Legs," at Tremont Temple, continues a strong drawing card.

"NOTHING BUT LOVE" reigns at the Wilbur for one more week.

"Sensational Girl"; Al Raymond and Tom Schram in a "Syncopated Cocktail."

That Cauliflower Ear!

When Douglas Fairbanks, whose most elaborate production, "His Majesty, the American," is now playing at the new Park Theatre, added wrestling to his regular daily routine of athletics he had no trouble in finding a sparring partner. There was a trained and expert pugilist "on the lot" at Doug's studio at Hollywood.

And he was none other than "Buff" Montana, whose fine acting in "The Unpardonable Sin" gained him universal renown as the most inhumanly, brutal looking man ever shown on the screen. And take it from Doug, he fights just the way he looks. More than once the King of the Movies has come within a fraction of an inch of being permanently disfigured by Buff's vicious and ham-like right paw.

Nevertheless, Buff and Doug are great friends. Buff, who has had a varied career, is proud of his fighting ability, as an evidence of which he exhibits a cauliflower ear.

Doug, who is also an athlete, featured during a twenty-round bare-fist battle in Alaska for the championship of Nome.

"This Fairbanks boy is a likely young fighter," said Buff, discussing his daily encounters with the King of the Movies, "and he sure does take up in speed and skill what little he lacks in force. But he'll never be a really great fighter. There ain't any really great fighters any more. Why, outside of myself I don't know of a fighter left that's got a real honest-to-goodness cauliflower ear. And no man can be a great fighter unless he has one. It's a sign of the trade, the same as gum for a typist, or inky fingers for a printer.

"Still, he's a clever boy with his fists, and it isn't every fellow that could stand up against me every morning, seven days a week. If he keeps on with me he's likely to develop into a really great fighter yet —cauliflower ear and all."

FENWAY THEATRE

"Stepping Out," with Enid Bennett, and "The Gray Towers Mystery," featuring Gladys Leslie, will be the chief attractions at the Fenway Theatre the early part of next week. The former play is the story of the neglected wife of a $25-a-week clerk, who teaches her neglectful husband a lesson. The other play, with its already famous title, speaks for itself. A Paramount Screen Magazine, Mutt and Jeff cartoon and news pictorial complete the bill. On Thursday's bill Robert Warwick will be seen in "Cold in the Hills" and Vivian Martin in "Third Kiss." Told in the Hills is Major Warwick's first picture since his return from France. Burton Holmes Travels, comedy and other short features are also included on this program. Miss Madeline D. Childs will play violin solos. Sunday, at 7:30 o'clock, Constance Talmadge will be shown in "Dangerous Days" and Marguerite Clark in "Little Miss Hoover." The Fenway Symphony Orchestra will accompany the pictures, besides rendering special selections.

ORPHEUM THEATRE

Minnie Burke, the "inky rocket", of the varieties, is announced as the stellar attraction for the initial three days of next week at Loew's Orpheum Theatre. Miss Burke will offer a new set of melodies, jazz and dances. The remainder of the vaudeville will include Harry Antrim, in "The Odd Fellow;" La Ray, Lytton & Co., in their new playlet called "Neighbors;" Gordon and Delmar, singers of "snappy" songs; Thelma De Roma, the sensational aerialist, and others. The feature photoplay will be the first Boston showings of the screen adaptation of Bayard Veiller's sensational stage success, "The 13th Chair," with Creighton Hale in the leading role. On Thursday there will be an entire change of bill. The topline photoplay will be Elaine Hammerstein in "The Country Cousin." The regular Sunday night concert of vaudeville and photoplays will be given.

GORDON'S OLYMPIA

"Lombardi, Ltd.," starring Bert Lytell, is the feature attraction next week at Gordon's Olympia. It is a picturization of the famous Oliver Morosco play, by Frederic and Fanny Hatton, which ran an entire season in New York and more than a year of continuous performances on tour.

On the same bill Charlie Chaplin appears in "The Floorwalker," and there is a new film showing famous film stars in private life. The vaudeville includes Jolly Johnny Jones in an originality, "A Tip on the Wire;" Ellis and Irwin, in "The Final Decision;" Howard and Ross, the famous banjoists, in a few new novelty creations; Spencer and Williams, in "Putting It Over;" the Casting Wards, American gymnasts, and the Olympia News Weekly.

LOEW'S GLOBE THEATRE

For the first three days of the coming week at Loew's Globe Theatre, Washington street, Creighton Hale and June Elvidge are the featured players. The first named will appear in an adaptation of Bayard Veiller's sensational drama, "The 13th Chair." Miss Elvidge will be seen in a special production, "The Woman of Lies." For the last half of the week Elaine Hammerstein, granddaughter of the late Oscar Hammerstein, will appear in Booth Tarkington's "The Country Cousin," and Albert Ray and Eleanor Fair, popular stars of the William Fox forces, in "The Lost Princess." On Sunday a concert of vaudeville and photoplays will run from 7 till 10 without a single repeat.

COLUMBIA THEATRE

For the coming week Loew's Columbia Theatre, South End, has a notable list of feature photoplays. On Monday Madge Kennedy will appear in "Through the Wrong Door," together with George Fawcett in "Wanted for Murder." Other programs are: Francis X. Bushman in "God's Outlaw," and Elaine Hammerstein in "Wanted for Murder" Wednesday and Thursday. Marion Davies in "The Dark Star," and Olive Thomas in "The Spite Bride;" Friday, Bessie Barriscale in "The Woman Michael Married," and Dixie Lee in "Where Bonds Are Loosed;" Saturday, Emmy Wehlen in "The Bells of the Season," and Harry Carey in "Ace of the Saddle." The usual Sunday night concert will contain a long list of attractive numbers.

BOSTON THEATRE

William Farnum will be seen at the Boston Theatre next week in a new film drama of Southwestern life—"The Lone Star Ranger." This is one of Zane Grey's most famous works, a thrilling story of life in Texas in the early eighties. William Farnum will appear as Steele, and Louise Lovely as Ray Longworth, the heroine. The comedy film is entitled "Up in Alf's Room." In the vaudeville Frank J. Conroy will present, with Howard Chase, a blackface skit entitled "The Magic Lamp." The Bramall Sisters will be seen in a knockabout comedy; the Altoff sisters will give a musical novelty; and Thomas and Gertrude Kennedy will present a dancing program.

WALDORF THEATRE

A change of policy which will assure patrons of the best of musical revues and motion pictures, with complete change of program every Monday and Thursday, is announced by the management of the Waldorf Theatre. The new policy will be inaugurated Monday with Marr's Musical Revue, featuring Pete Murray and a large chorus of charming girls. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday a revue called "The New Girl" will be given by these players, and on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, "Life in a Hotel." There will be no change in the scale of prices. Matinees will be given daily at 2 p. m., as heretofore, and the evening performances will begin at 7:30. In connection with the revues, two of which will be given each week, a number of exceptional and novel dancing girls will be seen, and the best of the new photoplays.

WALTER HAMPDEN IN HAMLET

As offered last season in New York, when 68 performances were given—the longest run since Booth—to "tempests of enthusiasm . . . standing room only"—(editorial in N. Y. Eve. Harvard and Boston College clashed in the Stadium today in the first big game of the season hereabouts. Both elevens were fit, with the Crimson the favorite.

Coach Fisher gave a trio of new men a chance. Art Hamilton, one of the young Crimson line buckers, was to start at right half, and Babe Frothingham, a husky 190-pound tackle, was slated for the left side of the line. Jack Desmond was at left end.

Coach Cavanaugh matched speed against weight and hoped his fleet pack from Boston College would run through the Harvard machine for an easy victory.

SCHOOL FOOTBALL GETS REAL START TODAY

School football got away to a real start today. Exeter opened their season against Portland. Charlie O'Hearn, one of the star athletes at Brookline High the past few years, will start as quarter for the Exeter team.

Medford, Brookline and Malden want the only Suburban League fit is playing today. Brookline went to Lynn to play Bill Joyce's Classical team while Malden went to Fitchburg. Andover and Cushing Academy, Newton 2d and Country Day School, Roxbury Latin and St. George, Noble Greenough and Middlesex, Huntington School and Allen School, and the Brown and Nichols School at Milton Academy were the private school games scheduled.

ST. JOHN'S PREP AND MEDFORD CLASH TODAY

The main attraction in school circles today for the football fans was the game between Medford High and St. John's Prep at the Fulton street grounds, Medford. The visiting team had the advantage of playing in their second game, while today opens the season for Jim Mansfield's aggregation.

Although the St. John's team will outweigh their opponents, Medford has the greater speed.

BIG GOLF STARS OF ENGLAND SLIPPING

By WALTER HAGEN,
Open Golf Champion.

Recently I was very much interested in reading an article by Harry Vardon, the famous English pro, in which he stated that no golfer should begin to deteriorate at the age of fifty. This was written in defence of the poor showing that the great triumvirate Taylor, Vardon and Braid had made in big tournament at St. Andrews, which took the place of the open championship in Great Britain.

It would begin to look as if those famous stars were slipping back faster than they themselves realized. I am not one to be deceived by a sudden lapse of form. As Vardon expressed it, "War work on the other side has so completely occupied their time and their mind as well," that it is little wonder that they should not fall into the old tournament habit and continue where they left off. Vardon might have solved the mystery when he suggested that other work had possibly put the golfing muscles out of attunement and cultivated other muscles. He never made a truer statement than when he remarked in the same article, that the best possible form of physical exercise for golf is the playing of golf.

Every man who plays golf knows that in the Spring his golf is many strokes worse than mid-season when his muscles are limbered up and the suppleness of the body has been recovered. This is true more of golfers past forty than of youngsters around twenty. The young man can get into condition much quicker. The youth is never really out of training and if he were his muscles would respond to exercise much quicker than those of the older man.

ARE REAL CHAMPIONS.

The three English pros mentioned have long been considered the best golfers in the world. Among them they have won sixteen open championships in Great Britain and it has always been considered that the English championship was a more important event and harder to win than our own open.

This may have been the case a few years ago, but I doubt whether it is a higher class event today. All three of these stars have planned to come to this country next year to compete in our championship and then we can judge for ourselves, whether they have gone back as much as their play this year would indicate.

If the older men, either amateur or pro, drop out of tournament play or find it harder and harder to keep pace with the new talent, it is in a measure their own fault, as no golfer who has kept in constant touch with his clubs should fall very far behind the proceedings at the half century mark. If in good health one should not begin to deteriorate at this age. There are many stiffly veterans at the game who can hold their place in the oncoming rush of the younger generation and championships played in the past have proved that men well beyond fifty are more than a match for the youngsters.

ENTHUSIASM BIG FACTOR.

When champions this age fall by the wayside it is usually because they lose their enthusiasm for the game and their keenness for competition. This is shown in the fact that they no longer think it worth while to devote a considerable time to practice. They see through learning new tricks and consider the old shots quite good enough, not that there are any new shots to learn, but there are always new clubs and new balls up for consideration, and golf courses, too, are becoming more and more difficult.

In the case of Vardon, Braid and Taylor, what would another championship mean to any one of the three? Vardon has six and Braid and Taylor five each. A victory next year might help to prove that they have not gone back as the golfing public seems to think, but it could add little to the reputation of any one of them. After winning an open event a half dozen times I hardly think one would still possess the same ambition to land another that he had when he went out after the first one.

WRIGHT IS WINNER IN PRESS TOURNEY

The first leg on the Hanover Trust Company trophy in the Boston Press Club tournament at the Wollaston Golf Club was won by Fred J. Wright, Jr., of Albemarle, who defeated George Aulbach of Scarboro in the final match of 36 holes by 6 and 5.

After the end of the first 18 holes Wright had gained a lead of 2 up. He had little difficulty in holding this lead on his afternoon's play and ended the match at the thirty-first hole, winning 6 and 5. In the second division, which was played from handicap, I. W. Small, Jr., Bear Hill, with a handicap of nine, won the final match from W. E. Hurley, handicap fourteen, by 3 and 1.

GOLFERS CLASH AT WOODLAND TODAY

Jesse P. Guilford appears to have everything his own way in the open amateur tournament at his home club, Woodland. Guilford, who won his first and second rounds of match play, was to meet H. B. Ingalls in the upper half of the draw in the first division for the Woodland trophy today, while F. H. Elliot, Woodland, and R. A. Wood of upper Country Club, were bracketed in the lower half. Wood is picked to beat Elliot, while Guilford, who played wonderful golf yesterday in his two rounds, should come through without having to extend himself.

BOSTON BANKERS' NINE MEETS NEW YORKERS

Brooklyn, Oct. 4.—Although baseball fans have their eyes turned towards the scene of the fourth Reds-Sox game in the Windy City, the followers of the Boston and New York Banker's League were watching the game between the Old Colony Trust Company of Boston and the Chase National Bank of Gotham here today. The second game will be played on Soldier's Field, Cambridge, one week from today.

B. U. ELEVEN WANTS GAME WITH HOLY CROSS

Connecticut State College, Lowell Textile School and Norwich University are already booked for football games with Boston University. Negotiations are under way for games with Bowdoin, Holy Cross, and Rhode Island State colleges. Coach MacDonald will put the candidates for the B. U. varsity team through some hard field practice today at the Columbus avenue playgrounds.

MIDGET KERR IS MYSTERY TO MORANS

By DAMON RUNYON.

Chicago, Oct. 4.—When "the fancy" are pawing over the litter they always disdain the runt.

Too small to sell for a lead nickel! Give him away; drown him; anything to get rid of him. The littlest of the family always has a mighty perilous existence.

Take Dick Kerr, now. A wee bop o' my thumb, not much taller than a walking stick and tiniest of the baseball brood.

"Won't weigh ninety pounds, sopping wet," an astute scout once reported to his employer after a look at Dick. "Too small for a pitcher, especially a left-hand pitcher: too small for much of anything, except perhaps a watch charm."

LIKE A GOLIATH.

Most of the baseball astute said much to the same effect about Kerr, but in the first game here Little Dick proved too big for the Cincinnati Reds. He grew, in front of them, to the proportions of a baseball Goliath and stopped the rush of the Ohioans toward the world's championship with a sudden shock.

They were shut out in the third game, which was the first game played in Chicago, by a score of 5 to 0, after taking two games in Cincinnati in a manner which caused the most ardent supporters of the Sox to dolefully wag their heads. Chicago is back in the fight. The littlest of the family now is the biggest man on the shores of Lake Michigan.

A MIDGET OF YORE.

Long, long ago, back in what now seems the very dark ages of baseball in fact, there was another pitcher who people said was too small when he first came into the game, but who eventually was acknowledged a giant of his kind.

His name was William Gleason and his size immediately prompted the nickname of "Kid." Today "Kid" Gleason is a grizzled fellow of fifty-four, no higher than when he first broke into baseball, though twice as wide and the manager of the White Sox.

He never agreed to the theory that Kerr was too small. He rather inclined toward little pitchers, probably feeling that the little fellows ought to stick together. He said that Kerr was going to make a good pitcher and he was vindicated this afternoon when Little Dick held the Reds to three hits.

Kerr pitched one of the classiest games ever seen in a world's series. Behind this sort of pitching and on their home grounds before nearly 30,000 of their home people, the White Sox were not the White Sox who played before the hostile Cincinnatians.

Tilton Leads Soccer Men

Gardner Tilton of Lexington has been appointed temporary captain of the Harvard soccer team. He was captain of his freshman team two years ago.

Daubert Not Hitting Since 'Beaned' in First Game

Chicago, Oct. 4.—One question in the ranks of the Cincinnati fans today is whether or not Grover Lowdermilk is responsible for Jake Daubert's failure to connect safely with the ball in the last two games. Daubert has not made a hit since he was knocked unconscious by one of Lowdermilk's fast ones. In the opinion of many he is not standing up and taking his usual healthy swing at the horsehide.

WOMAN'S GOLF TITLE PLAY IN FINAL ROUND

Chawnes-on-the-Delaware, Pa., Oct. —Miss Alexa Sterling of Atlanta and Mrs. W. A. Gavin met today to decide the woman's national golf championship. Miss Sterling, the present title holder, earned the right to defend her honors by defeating Mrs. Clarence H. Vanderbeck of Philadelphia at the eighteenth hole in one of the most sensational matches of the tournament. Mrs. Gavin won her victory over Miss Irene Peacock of Pittsburgh in the semi-finals, 3 and 2.

BROWN TO CAPTAIN WILLIAMS HARRIERS

Williamstown, Oct. 4.—Howard H. Brown, Williams' crack distance runner and track leader, has been elected cross-country champion for the coming year. At present he holds the New England intercollegiate honors for the cross-country run and two-mile distance. Williams' outlook for a winning cross-country team is bright. In addition to Brown, the Purple has other distance men of experience in Coan, Crofts and Parker.

YALE SQUAD IN FIRST GAME OF SEASON

New Haven, Oct. 4.—Yale opened the season today by meeting the Springfield Training College eleven in the bowl, before a crowd which the Yale football officials estimated was larger than that at any previous opening game here.

The playing surface of the bowl was muddy because of the three days' rain, followed by a warm wave, and three lineup changes, which were made, led the coaches to believe that the team which met the Massachusetts Collegians would prove slow and not a ready scorer.

REDS STILL STRONGER IN BOX

Kerr Delivered for White Sox in Third Game, but Moran Has More Pitchers Than Gleason

By NICK FLATLEY.

Chicago, Oct. 3.—It is the consensus of expert opinion that the World Series will last longer than five games. This was unanimously adopted at a meeting of the deans and scouts were appointed to go on a still hunt for a full nine-inning ball game. Up to the present writing, the spectators who handed out huge gobs of coin for World Series seats have been bamboozled by the magnates.

Incomplete performances have been put on and the last act has been eliminated. Furthermore, the players act as if they had a date every night and hustled through the games like a country fire department speeding to the nearest blaze.

In three games only four hours and fifty-six minutes of Western time have been consumed. Of this, two hours and twenty-four minutes have been captured by the Reds and only one and one-half hours by the White Sox. Thus it can be seen that the gents from Cincinnati are leading two to one any way you wish to figure it. It also must be remembered that time means money in this series

SOX OUT TO EVEN UP.

However, the Sox are happy today and will endeavor to make the count 50-50 or even Stephen, or something like that in fourth period. All they have to do is win another ball game and they are just as good as the Reds.

If they lose one they will be three times as bad, which shows you never can depend on figures.

At any rate, the whole town is dippy over the unexpected victory which was administered painlessly through a coat of whitewash. Not since Eddie Collins won the sprinting championship of the world from Heine Zimmerman at the Polo Grounds in 1917 has Michigan boulevard the lake been so "het up." One little victory has turned the tide and the folks will not admit they are likely to be licked. Far be it from that. Nothing in the world can convince them that Pat Moran's men will get more than a loser's share and their new uniforms.

APPEARANCES DECEITFUL.

Richard Kerr, whose every move reminds one of the strenuous kick in 2-3 lager, put over the brown derby. He looked like a half-pint pitcher, but appearances proved to be deceitful. He had nothing but some curves, a hop on his fast one and swell control and for that reason was slammed for three hits in nine innings. Incidentally, he joined the ranks of low hit hurlers and can look pals with Mathewson, Overall, Joe Bush and the other nifty gents of the past.

But the third game is over and the tough rub comes from now on. Gleason's two best bets were answered under in two starts and a young pitcher turned in a victory. Cheate and Wilhams have lost their games and the only ones remaining are Bill James a fair pegger, Erskine Mayer, not considered very good, and Red Faber, who has lost all of his stuff and shines only in pitching to Severin. On the other hand, Moran has Jimmy Ring and Hod Eller, the shine ball marvel. If these guys work in turn Pat will be able to start all over again with Reuther and Sallee.

We stopped Kid Gleason as he was leaving the ball park last night.

"What are you going to do about a pitcher?" we asked.

"What am I going to do?" said Gleason, agressively.

"Why should I worry? Anybody can beat the Reds now, and I don't care who I start, but just listen to this: I am going to shoot Eddie Cicotte back at them; and what do you think of that? He goes back and he will beat them. That talk of his sore arm is all bunk."

We were very much relieved to hear this, because we just had received a wire from Boston which read as follows:

"Moran can use Matt Kilroy or Amos Rusie in the box and still beat the White Sox. Please find out if Eddie Collins is playing."

HOW FANS FEEL.

That shows what the average fan thinks of the Reds when they are winning.

We can't win all of the games, said Moran early today. Fisher did not pitch bad ball but was unfortunate in having the breaks go against him. His error in the second when he made that wild throw which placed Chicago in position to score was excusable because he is a spitball pitcher and grabbed the moist part of the ball when making the throw. Ray did well, but the other players failed to hit and drive in any runs. The best pitcher in the world could not win under these conditions.

"Today I expect to start either Jimmy Ring or Hod Eller with the odds favoring the former."

The rabbit athletes have now settled down into their right playing form realising from the receipts in the last three days that their share will be the greatest ever in the history of the prosperous pastime.

Their bit out of the pot that already amounts to $250,000 or so is big enough to make them forget their dislike of paying the war tax when they go to the movies, what time they don't get down to the "legit."

PRAY FINELY PLAYED.

The fray was a mighty finely played affair with star performances coming along in startling rapidity. Both of the leaders played great ball, and there was nothing wrong with the outfielding.

It was a game that showed the teams are very evenly matched—that the once despised Reds pack as much class as the American League fliers.

But for the break that came when Fisher hurled a ball into centre field, the heroes might be playing yet, which would not worry the magnates any, as it would mean an extra game and $30,000 more.

DOUBLE SCORES, NOT PLAY.

What looked like an easy double play was manufactured into two scores because Pinch bargoned to bunt a spit ball, after Jackson had clouted out a hit to left.

Fisher grabbed the ball and heaved it in the general direction of Eddie Roush. Shoeless Joe danced to third and Happy perched on second, where he remained just long enough to give Chick Gandil a chance to hit a mesmo right. It was the first time fortune had frowned on the Reds during this hectic serious, and it ment the game.

To be sure, the White Stockings tacked on one more run in the fourth, but the Reds were behind them and facing perfect pitching. It would have been another story had the score been tied.

The Sox pitchers in the last two games have been shooting at the weakness in the Reds, and it looks as if the Gleason board of strategy had things doped out pretty shrewdly. If the Gleason pitchers can only live up to specifications there will be a whole lot of fireworks.

AS EVANS SAW IT.

Umpire Billy Evans, who was back of the plate Thursday when Claude Williams base-on-balled himself to disaster, told the correspondent that Claude really pitched magnificent ball, and that the had once were only missing the plate by fractions of inches all through the game. It was Billy's opinion that Williams was trying too hard not to give the Reds anything good to hit, and that if he hadn't been so careful he might have come through with a win, and the ambient author-arbitrator knows a few things about the dear old game.

NO LYNCHING IN CINCINNATI

KID GLEASON, heavily veiled, escaped from Cincinnati by the back entrance. The Mayor of Cincinnati and suburbs came out of his hiding place in the swamps after Kopf bammed that triple. There will be no lynching tonight. Ever since Omaha started the fashion, a Mayor's life ain't worth the chirp of a sick beetle. When anything goes wrong in the Middle West, they hang the Mayor. They used to beat their wives.

AFTER the crowd put away the rubber rope, the Mayor got quite brazen. He spoke at the Reds' banquet given by the Ohio Order of Pop Bottle Hurlers. The Mayor wore a vest with lapels on it. He said:

"Gentlemen, there are decimal points in the enthusiasm with which I greet you. You have made Cincinnati a baseball town of the first water. A comparison which may offend our brewers, but it's better than the stuff our brewers are handing us. As I look at the box scores, I feel almost proud to live in Cincinnati. Being a Mayor, I do not approve of hanging mayors. I trust that this will not offend you sportsmen but I have a very tender neck that won't stretch more than two feet without injuring the fabric. And a two-foot neck is too much territory for one Adam's apple to cover.

"However, so long as the muddy Ohio flows down to spoil the great and mighty ocean, my admiration for the Reds will also flow on forever like Tennyson's brook, a body of water, gentlemen, that is very much sung about but very little sought after.

"On the eve of the team's departure for Chicago to beard the lion in his boudoir, I speed you onwards with the acclamation of a great city sizzling in your ear trumpets.

"Go forth, and may the vulture of victory nest on your banners. This wouldn't be the first time that the Red team has carried the banner.

"I give thee the farewell of that Spartan mother-in-law. Either return victorious or return on your Ford wind shields."

THE Mayor made a powerful speech that almost interrupted the eating. After the cheering had evaporated, he spanged up his soup and left the banquet in his vest to get a snap to eat in a one-armed lunch. The Mayor is a wise cracker. When it comes to rope lynching, he wants to pick out his own neck ties.

HE returned home in his limousine, which he is thinking of having half soled and heeled account of the high cost of living. But whatever the cost of living is, the Mayor is willing to pay the price.

AS the teams are stepping through the motions in Chicago today, there will be no mayors lynched in Cincinnati this week. He is booked for sixteen speeches during the series and will keep right on chirping until the rope gets too tight. Which may be about Tuesday if the White Sox come out from under the ether.

MORAN PRAISES KERR'S GOOD PITCHING

By PAT MORAN,
Manager of the Reds.

Chicago, Oct. 4—The story of our defeat in the third game of the series is a tale that has to do with superlative pitching by a Chicago youngster—and a weird, but entirely excusable error by Ray Fisher.

My hat is off to little Dick Kerr, for that boy pitched a braid of baseball never surpassed in a World Series clash. The boys tried their best to smash his offerings to safe territory, but it was wasted effort. And when a fellow can halt the Reds on his campaign they started last Wednesday they fellow is great.

But when they stick Kerr back against us a different story perhaps will be told, for all through the year the Reds have shown a disposition to smash a new pitcher in their second facing. They didn't connect very successfully with him the first time, but they learned a lot about what he's got and they mean to use the knowledge to their advantage the next out.

I started Fisher because I figured that, having pitched three years against the Sox, he knows something about the weaknesses of their batsmen. Ray, despite the fact that he is a rookie, pitched a really splendid game of baseball. If he hadn't made that second inning error everything might have been different.

TRIED DANGEROUS PLAY.

In the second Ray tried a daring but dangerous play when he attempted to make a throw to second on a bunt while he was off balance. Had he waited to steady himself he might have got Jackson, anyway. But he didn't—and both runners were safe with none out, a state of affairs that permitted Gandil's long single to score them both.

But Fisher isn't to be blamed for taking the chance. Any one else would have done the same thing. It was taking chances that aided the Reds so materially throughout the regular season. Once in a while you lose, but oftener you've won out by that system.

The game-ness of those Reds showed splendidly all through the battle. Never once did they stop trying; never once did they halt in their efforts to overcome the lead of the Sox. They played a fielding game with all the brilliancy that they showed in the other two combats. They attempted to utilize every opportunity to tie the Sox and then go on to victory. But Dick Kerr stood in the way.

NOT DISCOURAGED.

Defeat hasn't discouraged the boys one bit, they've still got the big edge on the Sox. The fact that the Sox won a game simply will spur on the Reds to greater effort. They are a fighting crowd always—and they never fight better than when forced to fight to their utmost.

Remember the series with the Giants? We lost the first two and lost the next pair. Then we came right back and grabbed the fifth and sixth. The two defeats then were just the kind of spur that was needed. The same kind of spur we have got felt.

Watch the Reds, with Reuther leading the attack and with the boys rallying behind him with the same splendid battling spirit they've shown all year; the same spirit that carried them to pennant heights and will lift them to the absolute crest of the baseball world.

OFFSIDE SLANTS TOO MUCH FOR THE REDS

By HUGH S. FULLERTON.

Chicago, Oct. 4.—The Chicago White Sox, having lost their two aces only to baseball trumped, led the deuce in the third game, established their strong suit and broke into the winning column in the world series. Moran evidently thought the game was decided wild, but the White Sox wrecked the hopes of the Reds, who had commenced to dream of five straight victories and a niche in the Hall of Fame.

Richard Kerr de Lion Hearted, as one of our semi-stewed wits christened the tiny Texan, stopped the Reds and held them helpless while keeping along as if world championship games were his hobby and demonstrated again that the dope which declares the Reds cannot hit much against left-handed pitchers is true.

DOPE JUSTIFIED.

If ever the grand old dope was justified it was today. Each team did almost exactly what it figured to do against the opposing pitcher and, oddly enough, the fellows who dopes to do the hitting did it. Moran sent Ray Fisher to the slab, and he was the best pitcher developed from the start. Fisher has a habit of fighting despite the fact that he is a rookie, and he was putting too much on every ball he pitched, overexerting himself, and he was not certain of his control. He was, in fact, fortunate to escape slaughter in the second and third rounds. The White Sox for the first time since the series opened, were fighting.

There is an excuse for an error, for wildness, for over-caution in a World's Series, but there never has yet been conceived an alibi for a player failing to run out a play. In the second inning Fisher wabbled under the fierce attack of the White Sox, and the vaunted defence of the Reds crumbled quickly—always excepting Groh, who is incomparable. Two runs were across the runners on first and second and none out when Schalk pushed a forced bunt toward third. The Reds were caught flatfooted and the ball rolled down toward third.

GANDIL'S MISTAKE.

Gandil, coming up from second, had the ball been handled in the proper way, and seemed to be conversing with Kid Gleason when Fischer suddenly realized the ball was headed in his direction. Gandil made a fox trot step to touch third but was forced out on Groh's throw to Pinch. That play wrecked the White Sox rally and made the minority report look a lot more respectable than the majority would have done. In fact, the Sox probably would have piled up a big score in that round and taken all interest out of the battle.

It was not along the mistakes and the dullness of the White Sox's usually keen attack that held the score down to a single run. Groh made the most brilliant and desperate ever seen since that old Herzog in the famous Giant-Red Sox struggle. Groh broke down two drives that would have been hits and a lot more besides, and he smashed up two rallies and was the entire defense in the critical moments.

REDS NEVER IN IT.

Besides that Moran very obviously outguessed the Sox in the battle of wits. The White Sox hit and run went sadly awry. Whether it was Moran or Bill Harriden is a question, but whenever the White Sox attempted the play the ball was buried wide and the runner stopped down

Kerr Within Ace of Being Dropped As Big Leaguer

Chicago, Oct 4—Little Dick Kerr, who held the Reds to three scattering hits, came near going back to the minors last Spring. Kerr told Gleason that if he could not play ball in the big leagues he would not play at all, so the "Kid" hung onto him. Kerr demonstrated that his self-confidence was not unfounded, and he is today the idol of the loyal Sox fans

VETO IS VETOED IN COMMERCIAL A. C. BOUT

By JACK CONWAY.

Johnny Veto of Chelsea would have made a fortune if he had happened along the sporting speedway at the time Johnny Hayes, Dorando and Longboat were passing out their time running Marathons. Veto would have made these worthies hustle for the honors judging by the speed he displayed at the Commercial Club A. C. the unfortunate part of Veto's exhibition was that it was not appreciated by Referee Jack Sheehan and the fans. They were under the impression the Chelsea man was going to exhibit a little science and not Billy Carney of New Bedford.

For one round it was a real fight in the opening frame Carney baited Veto on the jaw and the Chelsea man hit the canvas a resounding thump. The bell sounded for the end of the session before Veto got on his feet.

Apparently Veto decided Carney was not the kind of person to take liberties with, for he spent the rest of the time he was in the ring trying to shatter all Marathon records. Carney was naturally awarded the decision, as he did his best to make it a fight.

The ten-round session between Johnny Sullivan, South Boston lightweight, and Tony Viera of New Bedford was declared a draw.

Peruvian Sugar

THE enormous production of sugar cane to the acre is one of the surprises of Peru. An average crop of forty tons an acre is obtained, while sixty and even seventy tons is not uncommon. In other sugar growing countries, including Cuba, twenty-five tons per acre are the rule.

THE GRAY HAIR

A MYSTERY STORY OF NEW YORK LIFE

"Society for the Redistribution of Superfluous Wealth" Terrorizes Millionaires

By Arthur Somers Roche

(Whose novels have placed him in the front rank as a writer of detective stories)

The Action So Far

John Hastings, multi-millionaire and captain of industry, has employed Robert Allaire, a young lawyer, to do some work for him. A criminal impersonates Allaire and reveals himself as a member of "The Society for the Redistribution of Superfluous Wealth." He threatens Hastings, who attempts to summon aid. The visitor shoots him dead and escapes. Arrested later, Allaire proves a perfect alibi. Police Commissioner Blake is puzzled. Meanwhile, three other millionaires are slain. Allaire receives a note from the society and talks over his arrest and the letter with Allison Courtney, his fiancee. Blake is replaced by Heenan, a famous detective. Millionaire Tobey is kidnaped by the dread society. Heenan finds the package of supposed protection" money to contain only waste paper. The master criminal had bound and gagged Wilkins' chauffeur and escaped with the real cash. Allaire thinks he recognizes Courtney driving a suspected taxi. Blake picks a gray hair from Allison's coat. He finds the costumer who sold the wig from which it came.

HE made this statement without malice, but when he added that Casey's left several friends who might resent inquisitiveness as to his life and habits, Blake decided that the bartender had spoken as much as he intended to. And after the man had denied knowing Casey's gray-haired acquaintance, and said that he didn't believe any of Casey's friends knew him, Blake decided that he'd learned all that he could.

If the gray-haired man were the murderer—and Blake had never a doubt of the fact—it was hardly probable that he'd been so indiscreet as to let Casey Red know where he lived and who he really was.

At any rate, even though the exprize fighter and actor's dresser had known his recent patron's identity, it was pretty certain that he'd kept it to himself. Otherwise information would have been given by the various stool-pigeons examined by the police.

If Casey Red had talked his speech would have traveled from one end of the underworld to the other, and Daly would have known of it and told Blake this morning. But Casey Red had been a close-mouthed chap, so his landlady and the bartender said; and, furthermore, his death had followed shortly after his drunken boastings about the big trick he'd turned the night of the Hastings murder.

If Red had been garrulous earlier he'd probably have died earlier. No; there was nothing to be gained by hanging around the rooms of the dead man any longer. Blake instructed his taxi driver to take him to the Moon office.

City Editor Groaned

He was no longer of news value, so quickly does that vaine leave a person in New York. The city editor, indeed, to whom Blake sent his name, groaned at reading it. Whenever a city official is deposed he is said not to bring the grievances to the newspapers, who do not wish to hear them unless with them he can bring some scandal. But Blake had been highly prized by newspaper men while in office, giving them access to news sources that, under previous commissioners, had been closed to them. So the city editor received him.

"Just want permission to look up a matter in your 'morgue,'" said Blake.

City editors are not too curious. If Blake were still commissioner and wanted to look at the clippings the city editor would have had some one note each article the commissioner read. As it was, he merely scribbled on a card the permission Blake asked, and handed it to the ex-commissioner with a smile of relief at not being requested to attack the Mayor and the new commissioner.

The Moon's "morgue" was not as complete an affair as that of the Star, but Blake had no such searching investigation before him as had Allaire on the other occasion when his list of diatribolic forgers. Blake merely wanted to look up what had been written about the life of one man—Peter Courtney.

He found the envelope quickly; rather, the attendant found it for him almost immediately. It was a bulky envelop, and it took Blake over an hour to digest its contents. For the Courtneys, though never rich as wealth is estimated nowadays, had always been well-to-do and more or less prominent socially. But most of the items had less to do with the Courtney family than with the return to New York of Peter Courtney years after his flight from home.

A Quick Conclusion

The reporters who had written the articles had had a good subject for a romantic sketch, and they had gone the limit. There were drawings of Peter Courtney in the midst of a desert; he was surrounded by savages; a real-black lady played Pocahontas and saved his life; he refused to wed her, and was condemned to death; he escaped—all laid upon the flimsy foundation that Peter Courtney, the returned prodigal, had spent several years prospecting in Africa. In Africa! In South Africa!

Not much here, perhaps, but enough. There were a hundred flaws in Blake's theory, but it is the conclusion that matters, not the road by which one arrives at the conclusion. Blake was certain that his conclusion was correct. That his reasoning was faulty, that but two and two did not make four, mattered nothing to him. Four was the answer.

He put the clippings back in the envelope with fingers that shook. No detective he! But he had been right when he told Allaire that all a detective needed was imagination; he could figure the whole thing out from start to finish. To finish! That meant Heenan.

It galled Blake to have to call in Heenan at his glorious climax, but the ex-commissioner had no power now. The police, under Heenan, must make the arrest. Still—what matter? Heenan would not dare steal the glory. Blake would have redeemed himself in the eyes of the public. The career that had been blasted but yesterday would be made whole again tonight.

From a booth in the lobby of the Moon building he called up police headquarters. The operator knew his voice. Like everyone else who had ever come into contact with Blake, he liked him on behalf. Therefore, he had no hesitation in telling Blake that Heenan was out on some case or other having to do with the mysterious society.

Blake was chagrined for a moment. Then he remembered his appointment with Allaire.

A Little Misgiving

"Tell the commissioner to call me up the moment he gets in, will you?" Or, if he's in the neighborhood, to come right over. It's extremely important." He gave the operator Allaire's address and telephone number. The operator promised, and Blake started up town.

He had a little misgiving as he reached Allaire's apartment house, but was unable to put into words which he must communicate to his late friend. But the gray hair had dislodged matters. Though the murderer had a thousand alibis not all of them were as the gray hair drawn from Allison Courtney's head. This gray hair straightened out the kinks in Blake's reasoning; to the stubborn mind of Blake, single-tracked, that went ahead despite all obstacles, there was nothing that could confute the evidence of the gray hair, when that was added to the other suspicious circumstances.

He put aside his misgiving. If he were right—and he was right—Allaire and Miss Courtney would not only hear no slightest ill will against him, but would be eternally grateful. He entered the building.

"Mr. Allaire home?" he asked of Henry, the elevator and telephone boy.

"Yes, sir," said Henry; "gentleman with him, sir. Went up a few minutes ago; so I know he's in. Go right up, sir. He's expecting you."

"Expected," said there's some one with him you'd better tell him."

Henry called up Allaire's apartment.

"It's all right, sir," he said to Blake. "He says for you to come right up."

A moment later Blake knocked on the door of Allaire's apartment. It opened, and he entered the small and dark hall that led to the living room. The electric light was not turned on in the hall and the light from the living room blinded rather than aided.

"Oh, I say, Allaire! Why don't you light up a bit? It's so dark——"

Then, for a second, it was not dark for Blake; it was blazing with light. Something had crashed upon his head; he pitched forward into the living room; before darkness came he had a glimpse of Allaire, prone upon the floor. Then the darkness came.

XIX.

COURTNEY was up and dressed when Allison's hour of happiness ended and she returned home. He was in the library, and her first glance showed her that he was terribly nervous. His lips twitched, and his slim hands, from which years of comparative idleness had taken the callouses that mining must have put there once, moved aimlessly about his desk. He looked up at her entrance.

"Where have you been?" he asked harshly.

"I've been with Bob," she answered. "And he wasn't intoxicated. I met him at the corner with Mr. Blake, the ex-commissioner of police. We sat in the Martinette parlors for an hour. At least, Bob and I did; Mr. Blake went somewhere. But he is to meet Bob at his apartment at six. I think he has some plan, uncle. And Bob hadn't been drinking; he was merely nervous. He—he'd had all exciting time before telephoning you. He and Mr. Blake—uncle, they were chasing the murderer."

"Chasing the murderer? Did they get him?"

"No."

She repeated to him all that Allaire and Blake had told her of the trick by which Heenan had been deceived, and Allaire's recognition, or part recognition, of the murderer in the Wilkins car. Her uncle heard her through in silence. But when she mentioned Allaire's feeling that he knew the murderer, he spoke.

Sharp Questioning

"Who was it? Doesn't he know? Hadn't he any suspicion at all?"

"Why," stammered Allison, taken a bit aback, "he thought he knew; but, of course, he was mistaken."

"Who did he think it was?"

She had not anticipated such sharp cross-questioning. Indeed, she had not anticipated telling her uncle as much as she had, but he had seemed interested, as indeed he might well be, and she had started and not been able to draw back. To her delight he grew calmer as she proceeded. But his nerves must still be in a terrible condition; she could not, of course, tell him what Allaire had thought.

A Misunderstanding

On the occasion of an important wedding a reporter called at the house where the reception had taken place to gather particulars. "Can you," he said pleasantly to the servant who answered his ring, "let me have some details of today's ceremony?" The servant frowned at him in a forbidding manner. "No, I can't!" she snapped, "They ate every crumb! And I think an able-bodied young man like you ought to be ashamed to beg!"

Lady Fingers

Separate the white from ten eggs and pour them into a basin; leave the yolks in another vessel. To these yolks add half a pound of powdered sugar, part of it being flavored with vanilla. Beat it up to make a very light preparation, then put in half a pound of sifted flour and ten whites beaten to a stiff froth, stirring the whole lightly together. Lay them in sheet of paper, using for this operation a pocket furnished with a half-inch diameter socket. Bestrew with powdered sugar, put them in a baking sheet and leave stand for a moment until the sugar begins to dissolve. Cook them in a moderate oven until they are of a golden color and the crust begins to harden. Remove at once from the baking sheet, and lay them on a table till cold.

When a Girl Marries

By Ann Lisle

CHAPTER CLXXXII.

Copyright, 1919, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

"WHAT time is the woman coming to help you pack?" asked Jim, when the last day in our little home rolled around.

"I only hope she comes." I replied incautiously; but at sight of Jim's face I added hastily, "Now don't call me a 'miser' again! I went to several agencies, but none of them had anyone in. But, finally, at the last place, they said that they'd try to have a woman here this morning."

"Well, you'd better 'phone and see," ordered Jim in great annoyance.

But when the agency couldn't promise me anyone he decided to stay home and help me, and 'phoned his office to say he wouldn't be down till after lunch.

"Now you start with the bedroom and I'll take the living room, and we'll work toward each other," said Jim, with a great air of efficiency; adding jovially: "We ought to meet about halfway between the gas stove and the ice chest."

So I immersed myself at once in stowing our wardrobes in the wardrobe trunks and piling our other possessions in Jim's big suitcase and some bags. I was working away so busily that I didn't hear the doorbell ring and had a real surprise when Jim came to the door and announced that it was getting on toward noon, and Mrs. O'Callahan had come from the agency to see if we wanted her for the rest of the day.

"We don't need her now——" I began, but Jim interrupted:

"Don't we just! I left her out there finishing up the living room, and I'm going to beat it for the office."

Rooms Engaged

"Jim, we haven't any beds or anything. Where are we going to sleep tonight?" I asked suddenly.

"You funny kid!" laughed Jim, indulgently. "I wondered when you were going to wake up and ask about that. Well, I've engaged rooms at the Walgrave——"

"The Walgrave?" I cried. "Why, Jimmie, that's where we spent our first week in the city—the week after our wonderful honeymoon. I'll love being at the Walgrave again—love it!"

"Will you love being at the Walgrave again with me, Princess Anne?" asked Jim—tenderly, it seemed.

At the sound of the dear name which he had used for so long, my eyes misted over and a queer choking feeling of happiness and hope made me sway a little on my feet. Jim took a quick step forward and caught my hands in his—then a mellow voice addressed us from the doorway:

"The front rooms' as bare as me hand of everythin', 'reptin' what himself tould me not to touch seein' as how he'd plied it on the refreshmint table to be stayin' here after ye. Now, what'll I be doin'?"

Jim's eyes flashed and he dropped my hands. Our moment was gone.

"I'll be running along to the office," said Jim almost awkwardly. "If I'm not at the apartment by five don't look for me much before seven at the Walgrave. Do you want to go to a show tonight?"

"Not specially—unless you do." I replied in equal embarrassment. I felt as if a policeman had caught us holding hands on a park bench.

"Well—I'll see. So long," said Jim and rushed out as if he were making his escape.

Finished the Packing

Mrs. O'Callahan and I finished the packing, got a snack of lunch, lidied up the apartment, and then—in a taxicab laden to its last inch of tonnage—drove first to the Walgrave, where I deposited a trunk and a pair of bags and then on to the new apartment. It was long after 4 when we arrived, and by the time I had stowed away the remaining trunks and bags and boxes Mrs. O'Callahan announced that her day was over and she wouldn't work another hour for man nor woman.

So I gave her directions for the morrow and permitted her to depart. For a while I roamed about the apartment, but it seemed cold and unfriendly, and when Jim had not arrived by half-past five I decided to go to the Walgrave. I had plenty of time, so I walked, smiling to myself at what I knew Jim would call my miserliness.

Day-dreaming happily, I swung along my way. We were going back to the Walgrave, where we had spent such glowing days together. Jim had called me his Princess again and had caught my hands with a flash of the feeling I had begun to think I was powerless to kindle. Perhaps in the Walgrave we would find again our romance, our lost joy in each other.

Suddenly I noticed a familiar figure swinging down the street ahead of me. As it dashed up the steps of a house, rang the bell and was admitted promptly. I awoke from dreaming. It was Neal I had seen—Neal going into Evvy Mason's home.

Almost of their own volition my feet started up the steps after him.

To Be Continued.

Through the Widow's Lorgnette

By HELEN ROWLAND

It's the Men, Not the Women, Who Keep the "Beauty Profiteers" Rich—And All Because Men Regard Beauty as a "Necessity" in Women.

Copyright, 1919, by The Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.

"ISN'T it fortunate," remarked the Widow, gazing with unconcealed satisfaction at the radiant vision which smiled back at her from the little Moyenage mirror, above the rose-lit tea-table, "that my hair happens to be the fashionable shade this season?"

"Fortunate!" exclaimed the Bachelor, stopping with the lemon fork poised in mid-air. "To want it any OTHER shade wouldn't be human!"

"Oh, yes it would!" retorted the Widow. "To yearn to improve on nature, by changing your personal color-scheme is the most human instinct in the world! If you don't believe it, you can go right back and ask the ancient savages, who used to dye their hair a bright vermillion, and paint their faces until they resembled camouflaged war-vessels! It's that same primeval human instinct on which the 'Beauty Profiteers' thrive and fatten and make their 'tainted millions,' Mr. Cutting."

"I don't have to ask the 'ancient savages,'" jeered the Bachelor, scornfully, "I can go right out in front of this tea-room and ask some of the hundred or so modern ones I'll meet in their 5 o'clock promenade on the Avenue. Such complete works of art——"

"Yes, AREN'T they dazzling!" burbled the Widow delightedly. "But it saves a lot of money to be born—that is, to be——"

"To be born beautiful!" suggested the Bachelor helpfully.

"To be born sensible, Mr. Cutting," corrected the Widow, flushing faintly pink and pretending to pat in a stray lock, with another glance at the mirror. "Especially," she added, "now that beauty, like all the other necessities of life, is SO expensive!"

"Who says that beauty is one of the 'necessities of life'?" demanded the Bachelor.

"EVERYBODY, Mr. Cutting—that is, every MAN!" declared the Widow. "Did you ever try offering to introduce one of them to a 'fascinatingly homely' girl?" she added sweetly. "If it weren't for the men and their child-like worship of beauty, half the 'Beauty Profiteers' in this city would go out of business within a week. But it's awfully hard on the women! Think of a poor, struggling, defenceless girl having to pay two dollars for the latest shape in eyebrows, and fifty dollars for a hair tint that will last only six weeks at the longest, and two or three hundred dollars for a new face, complete, every six months——"

"Stop! Stop!" cried the Bachelor, in horrified consternation. "What are you telling me? What do you mean by smashing the illusions and trying to destroy my innocent, trusting young soul?"

"And I actually know one woman," went on the Widow relentlessly, who paid as much as a thousand dollars for a new figure."

"The little eighteen-carat imbecile!" muttered the Bachelor.

"Then you haven't the faintest idea of the cost of BEAUTY!" announced the Widow, calmly. "You haven't the faintest idea of what the foolish women suffer, who have their faces peeled, or wear shoes two sizes too small, or go through the sacred rites of the permanent wave—and ALL to be charming to some man who regards beauty as a necessity! And the highest item on beauty's bill-of-costs is the terrible ordeal of seeing it fade before your very eyes. Oh, yes, beauty, if you can attain even a small measure of it, is worth any price you may pay for it—but I sometimes wonder if it is EVER worth the cost of losing it!"

"Never having lost my beauty," began the Bachelor modestly, "I am not in a position to say—but if it's anything like LOVE——" and he leaned over and placed his hand firmly over the Widow's, "If it is anything like love, I'd be willing to have my eyebrows pulled——"

"Mr. Cutting!" remonstrated the Widow.

"And have my front teeth extracted, and myself peeled alive."

"Everybody will be looking in a minute!" protested the Widow.

"Just to attain a small measure of it!" sighed the Bachelor, leaning back and releasing her hand, as the waiter hurried toward them with the check.

"Now," laughed the Widow, picking up her gloves, "you are about to pay the PRICE of that terrible tea!"

"But what is COST me to drink the stuff, nobody ever will know!" confessed the Bachelor, tragically.

WIDOW-CISMS

A husband has to be awfully progressive in these days in order to talk intelligently to an up-to-date wife about her business affairs and politics.

It isn't a girl's big virtues, but her cunning little ways that make a man want to marry her; and it isn't her big faults, but her annoying little habits, that make him wish he hadn't.

It always suprises and saddens a man to see one of his bachelor friends succumb to matrimony; but nothing really shocks and astonishes him, until he finds himself standing before the altar, signing his own name in the "death certificate" of his liberty.

A bachelor reasons that if he bestows himself upon no woman, he can make it up to the sex by bestowing his attentions, compliments and kisses upon ALL women—thus scattering sweetness and light.

RED CROSS WORKER SICK TWO YEARS

TELLS HOW SHE GOT WELL.

Miss G. L. Baird of 59 Lisette Ave., Allston, Mass., writes: "I have been sick almost two years, had four doctors, with little or no relief. Was growing thin every day, went from 126 to 111. I was so discouraged I didn't know what to do. One night about three weeks ago, I picked up a paper and saw your Dr. True's Elixir, Family Laxative and Worm Expeller, advertised. I made up my mind I had nought to lose, and the next day bought a small bottle of Dr. True's Elixir. I was surprised in the result, stomach worked some a finger long, so much alive, that looked as though it had all the skin of worms. The day before I took Dr. True's Elixir, I thought I should go wild with the crawling in my stomach. I feel like a new person, all my friends say I look so much better. I wouldn't have believed any one could feel so much better in such a short time. I can't give your medicine praise enough."

Signs of worms: Constipation, offensive breath, swollen upper lip, sour stomach, deranged stomach, occasional grippings and pains about the navel, pale face of leaden tint, eyes heavy and dull, twitching eyelids, itching of the nose, itching of the rectum, short dry cough, grinding of the teeth, red points on the tongue, starting during sleep, slow fever. Dr. True's Elixir, The Family Laxative and Worm Expeller, is sold by ALL DEALERS.

Stocks Strong in Both Markets at Week-End

CRUCIBLE LED STEELS IN GAINS

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks were strong in New York at the close and many sold at highest prices for the session during the last half hour. After a firm opening prices reacted a little on profit taking, but subsequently took a turn and moved upward during the remainder of the morning. Crucible Steel was a feature among steels, showing eleven points gain at its highest.

Among strongest issues were Cuba Cane, American Locomotive, Baldwin, American Tobacco, American Woolen, Atlantic Gulf, Corn Products, General Motors, Studebaker, Goodrich, Kelly Springfield, Denver and Rio Grande preferred, Reading, Southern Pacific, Union Pacific and Mexican Petroleum. They were all advanced at their highest from about three to seven points. General Motors led this list in gains.

At one time rails were the strongest and most active group. U. S. Steel closed with 1% gain at 105%, Bethlehem B was up 1% at 103%, and Republic Steel 1½ at 94¾.

Sales for today were 501,100 shares; bonds, $6,324,000. Total sales for the week 7,719,198 shares; bonds $73,494,000.

In the foreign exchange market opening quotations were: Demand sterling, 4.73; cables, 4.72½; francs, 5.40 and 5.35, lire, 9.82 and 9.80; marks, .43.

It was stated in New York that consumers had bought several million pounds of cotton on the speculative interests recently for October and last quarter delivery under 21½ cents a pound.

Prices were higher at the opening sheets, equipments, oils and motors buying supported the market. Reading, President Wilson's condition was less negative to have much influence upon speculative trades are giving less attention to the steel strike, but reports concerning it are construed as favorable to bulls. Overnight covering helped strengthen stocks at the start. The general situation is such as to warrant caution as to week-end commitments.

The short interest is estimated as still being large, although covering has been on a magnificent scale for days. It is also understood that despite profit taking the floating supply of stocks is moderate. Crucible Steels are said to be strongly held and is asserted there has been no liquidation recently except by certain speculative interests and that element during the public will not easily frightened or unable to hold on.

More ease as regards money is predicted with the financial title latter October disbursements back into banks. On the New York weak Friday change on Friday $2,450,000 was loaned at 6 per cent, $10,000,000 at 7 per cent, $4,000 at 8 per cent; $4,750,000 at 9 per cent, and $14,300,000 at 12 per cent, or a total of $35,125,000.

New York Bank Statement

New York, Oct. 4.—According to actual condition revealed in the weekly statement by New York clearing house banks surplus reserves increased $21,182,800, while as to average condition there was an increase of $67,940. Other changes included:

Actual loans increased $24,343,000; demand deposits increased $5,540,000; time deposits increased $4,982,000.

Cotton Market

New York, Oct. 4.—At the opening cotton prices were six to fifteen points lower, after selling by Wall street and the South, based on favorable reports from outside the belt, and showed further losses. Opening prices were: October, 30.60; off 10; December, 30.45; off 10; January, 31.05 to 31, off 9 to 11; March, 31.13, off 10; May, 31.15, off 7.

Cotton closed easy: Oct., 30.55@30; Nov., 30.05@30.50@27; Dec., 30.55@30; Jan., 30.80@30.87; March, 31.60@31.02; April, 31.00 bid; May, 31.10@31.12; June and July, 31.05 bid; August, 30.55 bid.

Spot cotton, with middling 10 points lower at $1.20c. No sales.

New Orleans, Oct. 4.—Spot cotton quiet with middling ½c lower at 31¼c. Sales 1,227.

Chicago Grain Market

Chicago, Oct. 4.—Corn opened ⅝c to 1¼c lower. Oats were unchanged to ⅛c lower. Provisions opened lower. Opening prices were: Corn—December, 1.27¾ to 1.28; May, 1.32¾ to 1.33. Oats—December, 70½; May, 72¾. Lard—January, 22.92. Ribs—January, 18.00.

CANDY CONSUMPTION AND COSTS IN THE U. S.

It is estimated that the American people consume from 1,100,000,000 to 1,400,000,000 pounds of candy and chocolate a year and that they are now spending for the same from $750,000,000 to $800,000,000 annually for such sweets. When prohibition is fully enforced it is believed that expenditures for candy in the United States will amount to one billion dollars a year.

It is figured that when the country was "wet" Americans expended $2,000,000,000 a year for alcoholic drinks.

Wall Street Briefs

The Indian Refining Company reports for the first half of this year earnings of $31.68 a share on existing common stock after all charges and a net surplus of $1,768,030 as of June 30, against $995,833 Dec. 31, 1918, and $1,156,833 June 30, 1918.

The United States Distributing Corporation has been incorporated under the laws of the State of Virginia, with an authorized capital of $25,000,000, to engage in the distribution of coal, ice, lumber and building materials.

George F. Getz, president of the Globe Coal Company of Chicago and a member of the advisory committee of the Consumers' Company of Chicago, has been selected as president.

PRICES HIGHER ON BOSTON EXCHANGE

The Boston market was irregular at the opening, but soon became strong and held the improvement during the morning. A few issues developed especial strength including Stewart and Waltham Watch. They were up three points at their highest. Mullins Body made the largest gain in the motor accessory group.

Among issues to advance fractionally were Root & Van Dervoort, Swift International, Swift, Hood Rubber, Helvetia, Carson Hill, Fairbanks, New Haven and Ventura. New River advanced to 28¾, a high record price. Amoskeag gained two and Boston Elevated a point and a half.

Parish Bingham began with a small gain, but later showed a little loss. Grady & Davis receded a fraction and Punta Sugar a point and a half. Other weak issues included Allouez, Copper Range, Mohawk, North Butte and New Cornelia. The market was quiet.

BOSTON FINANCIAL NOTES.

It is reported that a new body of gold ore has been located in the Carson Hill property, in Calaveras County, California. Preliminary openings in 1919 assault approximate from $7.50 to $8 a short. Arrangements have been made to the New York Stock Exchange, it was said in that city yesterday, that this stock might not be listed there for almost months.

On Monday next and thereafter Boston Stock Exchange clearing house charges will be five cents instead of three and one-half cents per $1,000.

During the fiscal year ended with August last the Ray Hercules Copper Company produced 4,994,855 pounds of copper. Its plant is at Ray, Pinal County, Arizona.

Richard Pigeon of Patterson & Co. has been made a member of the Boston Stock Exchange.

The Framingham Gas, Fuel and Power, Natick Gas Light and West Boston Gas companies have been authorized to merge under name of the West Boston Gas Company with an aggregate capital of $279,500.

EASTERN STEAMSHIP TRAFFIC

Traffic of the Eastern Steamship Company for the season shows an increase in every service. Undoubtedly the Metropolitan Line between Boston and New York could double the business if the capacity of the steamers was permitted. The traversing from Boston to New York by way of Newport instead of the long passage through Cape Cod Canal make a special appeal to the traveling public.

Usually July, August and September have proved the banner months, but this year it is thought October would see an equal patronage, with the staterooms all sold in advance. The schedule is five days per week, including Sundays, leaving India wharf, Boston, and Pier 19, E. 3rd St., foot of Battery street, New York, at 5 p. m., arriving at eight the following morning.

Business on the Northeast, Bangor and St. John divisions continues good, while the Yarmouth line is reported above the average.

The schedules are: Leave for Portland at 5 p. m. every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday; for St. John, every Monday and Friday at 10 a. m., and for Yarmouth, every Tuesday and Friday at 5 p. m.; all from Central wharf.

The Bangor boat leaves three times a week, on Monday, Wednesday and Friday, at 5 p. m., from India wharf, making connections at Rockland for Bar Harbor and intermediate landings.

GAIETY THEATRE

Harry Gerard's 1919 edition of "Follies of the Day" opens at the Gayety Theatre on Monday afternoon. It is said to be new and up to date. It is entitled "Pulla's Going Up" and is in two acts. The thread of plot serves to introduce incidents from several Broadway successes, notably "Lily of the Valley" with Al Tint, "Rising Up," "Business Before Pleasure," and "East Is West." The organization is headed by Harry (Watch the Step) Welsh and George F. Hayes. The revue runs through several scenes, beginning with a combination photo gallery and pawn shop, an aviation field with planes soaring through the air, and a replica of the Oriental scene in "East Is West" which, for splendor, surpasses anything ever attempted in burlesque.

Twenty or more musical numbers and original dances are introduced.

SCOLLAY SQ. OLYMPIA

Young men anticipating marriage will find helpful hints in "A Temperamental Wife," starring Constance Talmadge, which will be shown next week at the Scollay Square Olympia. Probably no young man would be confronted with as perplexing a situation as the sickly Senator Newton from Nevada who was "vamped" by Billy Billings. The Senator, however, turns out to be a model husband after all, without the aid of a Bulgarian Count, and takes other chances.

A new film showing well-known movie stars in private life, a Charlie Chaplin comedy, "The Floorwalker," and the Sunday News Weekly and a good bill of vaudeville complete the program.

CODMAN SQUARE THEATRE

Olive Thomas as a "baby vampire" in "Upstairs and Down," a photoplay from the novel of the same name, will be the attraction at the Codman Square Theatre next week for the first three days of next week. The role is well suited to her piquant personality and the support provided here is excellent. The remainder of the bill will offer vaudeville and motor quality an Outing Chester, the latest pictorial news and a new comedy and travel picture. Friday will be the concluding portion of the week the topline photoplay will be "A Man's Desire" by Will M. Mitchell with Lewis first to be featured. On Sunday night there will be a special Sunday evening vaudeville and photoplay features.

MALDEN AUDITORIUM

"Diarsall," Louis N. Parker's comedy, which attained a record run in London, is announced for revival by the Temple Stock Company at the Malden Auditorium next week. The production will closely follow that of the original company. In characters and action "Diarsall" is a comedy of the rare sort. The title role will be enacted by Dwight Meade, with Adelyn Bushnell as the heroine.

MODERN and BEACON THEATRES

The big London Theatre fire, and the wreck of an ocean liner in which passengers are rescued are spectacular features of "The Life Line," a Drury Lane production which will be shown at the Modern and Beacon Theatres next week. It is derived from the play known on the stage as "The Roman Rye." The ocean liner photoplay will show Warner Reid in "The Lottery Man," a version of Rida Johnson Young's play which scored a New York success a few years ago. All its freshness and Mun-making qualities are said to have been retained in the screen version, and Wallace Reid, in the role of the chance-taking hero, gives a spirited performance. The story concerns a young man, who, to pay a debt,

Cardinal Mercier Will Be Given Royal Welcome in Boston

[A correspondent, impressed by the coming of Cardinal Mercier to Boston, has asked the American to republish an editorial printed in this column last August concerning the event. Here it is.—Editor.]

So Cardinal Mercier of Belgium is coming to Boston. How we shall welcome him! No clergyman in recent years has taken hold of the imagination of the civilized world as Cardinal Mercier.

He stood like a lighthouse in a storm of hate and terror. He was like an old Roman Tribune of the People, a sanctuary for the victims of misused power. With our own Ambassador Brand Whitlock he was the oasis of civilization in Belgium after the Germans came and applied to its unhappy people their policy of blood and iron and of terror. While Brand Whitlock's services were great and his conceptions of justice and mercy were splendid and his sacrifice of time was noble, yet Cardinal Mercier equalled him in all these virtues, but was obliged to exhibit still another virtue which our ambassador did not need to display. Mr. Whitlock had the physical power of the United States behind him. Cardinal Mercier had only the moral influence of his great church behind him. Brand Whitlock was never in danger of imprisonment or physical force. Cardinal Mercier had to face that danger always. But it never restrained his hand or silenced his tongue, and the German military leaders and the Kaiser squirmed under it many a time.

It was Cardinal Mercier's protest to the world against the German atrocities in Belgium which convinced the neutral world that Germany had abandoned all civilized restraints which stood between her and victory, and it was the knowledge of her conduct in Belgium, brought home to Americans largely by Cardinal Mercier, that turned American public opinion against Germany; and it was the turning of public opinion against Germany that finally put us into the war against her and resulted in her defeat. If Germany had won the war, the German military caste and her landed aristocracy, with their control of press and pulpit and their moral philosophy that "might makes right," would have prevailed and set the example for the world. The Kaiser's court would have been the court which sycophantic Americans would seek to flutter about, and those who now fawn at everything that is British would be fawning at everything that is German—not that the British are much better, but that we have now in Germany a great democracy and in Austria and Hungary a great democracy. While victory has temporarily taken democracy from Great Britain and France, yet the forms of democracy are there ready to be used as soon as the people unloose their minds from the military habit and resume the democratic ways.

So it is that Cardinal Mercier, by illuminating the dark places in Belgium, has rendered an immense service to mankind, and so it is that Boston will welcome him with a royal welcome.

Congressman Tinkham Takes Prompt Action

Congressman George Holden Tinkham of Massachusetts has introduced a resolution in Congress denouncing the use of the American army and navy and the shedding of further American blood in the petty quarrels of Europe without the sanction of Congress.

This resolution was occasioned by the use of the American marines under orders of the British admiral to drive Italian troops out of a certain Italian town in Dalmatia.

We are not at war with Italy. Italy is our good friend and associate. We have no quarrel with her whatever and we ought to have none. It is about time we stopped pulling other nations' chestnuts out of the fire, and especially it is high time that we stop shedding American blood in the course of being a British goat. We give Great Britain six votes to our one in the League of Nations. We give her command of our troops in the unprovoked, unjustifiable and outrageous fighting against the Russian people in Archangel. We did the same thing in Siberia and now we have obeyed British orders in Dalmatia. Pretty soon we shall be ordered to interfere in Rumania and Hungary at the further cost of American blood and treasure.

These are the early specimen fruits of the proposed new policy of sticking our fingers in everybody's pie and of a League of Nations brought back to us by President Wilson, but written in England, by Englishmen, for Englishmen.

Congressman Tinkham deserves the thanks of every American for his prompt action, and we hope to hear his voice ringing on the floor of the House in protest against this whole wretched business.

Mr. Stevens' Spirited Reply

The National Surety Company is a corporation having its headquarters in New York city and claims to be the world's largest surety company. One of its agents is Sidney Stevens, Esq., of Millinocket, Me. This company wrote a general letter signed by its president to Mr. Stevens requesting him to write to his Congressmen and Senators in behalf of the meat packers. Mr. Stevens made the following spirited and interesting rejoinder:

I resent your effort, under cover of business relations, to influence me in matters not concerned therein.

I regard your letter relative to the meat packers as an impertinence such as you would resent if it were the other way around. An agency in your company does not imply that the person holding such agency may not have as good powers of reasoning upon such subjects as you have.

It is my duty, I believe, to let the public know of methods like this when business connections are used to influence weak-minded subordinates attached to big business concerns; and further I would like to ask if this matter of the meat packers is any of your business as president of the surety company?

Enough said.

More Truth Than Poetry

JUNK ROUGH AND BOLD.

ALBERT OF BELGIUM

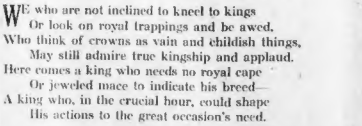
By S. E. KISER

HERE comes a king whom free men may applaud,
A prince who can be princely wearing rags;
He has no need of any tinsel gaud,
His royalty requires no royal tags!
Who asks him if he rules by right divine,
Or loves him only for his regal birth?
We may forget the sources of his line
And pay him tribute for his manly worth.

THROUGH trivial accidents kings reach their thrones,
And foolishly believe themselves sublime;
With nothing more than common flesh and bones
They walk where carpets are spread over slime;
But here's a king who has not feared to tread
In mire made soggy by heroic blood,
A prince courageous who has gone to bed
Beside undaunted peasants in the mud.

HERE comes a king who is a king, indeed,
Whose valor has been proved, whose knighthood earned!
Scorning the ways of kings who dare to lead
Only in proud processions, he has learned
The taste of blackened crusts, and stood on guard,
With Horror for companion, through the night—
A man to whom no task appeared too hard,
A prince by more than any royal right.

WE who are not inclined to kneel to kings
Or look on royal trappings and be awed,
Who think of crowns as vain and childish things,
May still admire true kingship and applaud.
Here comes a king who needs no royal cape
Or jeweled mace to indicate his breed—
A king who, in the crucial hour, could shape
His actions to the great occasion's need.



THE WORLD MOVES ON

Once artists practiced art for art's sake and lived on crusts. Now they make advertising pictures and employ butlers.

IF SO, NAME IT

Can you think of anything besides trouble that a man is willing to give up before he has had more than his share?

A SUBJECT FOR EXAMINATION

"Why do you consider him eccentric?"
"He is still willing to rent his house at a profit of less than 30 per cent. on his investment."

I'M NOT quite sure.
IF IT'LL work out.
BUT LAST night.
I HAD a long talk.
WITH ONE of the girls.
WHO CHECKS hats.
AT THE Copley-Plaza.
AND TOMORROW night.
I HAVE a date.
TO TALK to a girl.
WHO CHECKS hats.
UP AT the Touraine.
AND WHAT I'm doing.
IS TO make them feel.
THAT IT'S all wrong.
THE WAY they're treated.
AND THAT while they're working.
AT BREAKFAST time.
AND LUNCHEON time.
AND DINNER time.
AND LATE at night.
THAT SOMEWHERE.
SOME FAT guy.
IS RUNNING around.
SPENDING THE dimes.
AND THE two-bit pieces.
THAT THE girls pick up.
FOR CHECKING hats.
AND THE way I tell it.
I PRETEND to be mad.
AND I almost cry.
AND LAST night.
I DID it so well.
THAT THE girl cried.
AND SO far as I know.
SHE WAS perfectly happy.
TILL I came.
AND ANYWAY.
WHAT I want to do.
IS TO make 'em strike.
SO THEY'LL close the check rooms.
AND THE girls will parade.
AND WEAR cardboard signs.
WITH PRINTING on them.
"DON'T CHECK your hats.
"TAKE THEM in with you."
AND AFTER that.
I'M GOING around.
TO ALL the wash rooms.
IN THE restaurants.
AND THE city hotels.
AND SEE the young men.
WHO LIE in wait.
WITH A brush in one hand.
AND A towel in the other.
AND I'LL talk to them.
ABOUT THE bright sunlight.
AND THE autumn leaves.
AND THE close little places.
WHERE THEY have to work.
AND MAYBE they'll strike.
AND WHAT with that.
AND THE check girls striking.
I'VE FIGURED it out.
THAT I'LL make it possible.
FOR THE common mortal.
TO BEGIN to perk up.
AND GET a little courage.
AND MAYBE we'll have meetings.
AND AFTER a while.
FROM THIS very small beginning.
WE MAY fix things.
SO THAT you and I.
WILL HAVE something to say.
ABOUT HOW we shall be robbed.

I THANK YOU.

Industrial Peace or Chaos? Perkins on Profit Sharing

"Industrial peace or chaos?" That is the issue to be decided by the industrial conference, called by President Wilson, which opens in Washington on Monday.

"The world is looking to America to lead the way in solving the problems of capital and labor," declares Justin McGrath, editorial correspondent of Universal Service. In tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser he tells of the tremendous importance of this conference. A remedy must be found, or a bad situation in the United States will become worse and Europe's crisis will quickly develop into disaster, Mr. McGrath believes.

The writer, one of the most thoughtful newspaper men in this country, has prepared an article that calls attention to the vast importance of a session whose deliberations will be watched by every employer and employe.

"Labor must become a real partner with capital if we are to remove the dangers that menace American industry," declares George W. Perkins, in a page feature article of exceptional timeliness which appears tomorrow.

Mr. Perkins began life as an office boy and became a partner in J. P. Morgan & Company and a director in the United States Steel Company and other vast enterprises. He was a pioneer in advocating profit sharing. The conclusions he reaches in his article are based on thirty years of seeking the solution of the workers' demand for a fair share of the profits of industry. No one could write more authoritatively.

Is milk too cheap? Both the farmers and the dealers declare they are losing money at present prices. The Boston Sunday Advertiser will present facts and figures from both sides which throw a great light on the New England milk situation, particularly from the viewpoint of the consumer.

Massachusetts teachers are unable to live on the pittances they receive. They are forced, in hundreds of instances, to draw upon their savings and seek work outside school hours. This situation, a menace to the teaching standards in this State, is discussed tomorrow by Dr. Payson Smith, commissioner of education. A comprehensive table of figures tells in dollars and cents of an alarming condition.

Very few persons know the story of the real King Albert, the fighter, who shunned the comforts and pleasures of his court to fight side by side with his own men, always within range of the enemy's guns, in the tiny strip they held desperately until the tide turned and they won their beloved country back.

While observing military tactics as chief of the United States Military Mission at Belgian Headquarters, Captain W. P. Cresson found time also to observe Albert. His discoveries form one of the most timely and interesting features of tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser, especially in view of the distinguished monarch's visit.

Mrs. Thomas P. Gore, in a signed article written for the Boston Sunday Advertiser, graphically pictures the despair of hundreds of maimed war heroes for whom the government fails to provide. "Don't expect too much from the government, boys," a Congressman told them. The Senator's wife issues a stirring appeal for amendment to the War Risk Insurance Act.

Aliens who were Fit to Fight for the Flag Must Be Educated to Vote, writes Herbert Kaufman, America's most epigrammatic essayist, special assistant to Secretary Lane, in a signed article for the Boston Sunday Advertiser. Illiteracy breeds anarchy and Bolshevism, and "anarchy shall never want for mobs when the uninformed are left at the mercy of false prophets," he says in a powerful plea for the passage of the Smith-Bankhead education bill.

Did you ever stop to consider the danger of ratifying the Shantung provision of the peace treaty? China, now our friend, would become an enemy. The danger lies in underestimating the vast resources of the Celestial Empire, with a potential army of fifty million splendid fighters quick to learn, eager to work and implacable when roused.

A man who has seen and studied the Celestial power tells a story in tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser that will make you stop and think.

The infant Irish Republic is already taking big strides. Seumas MacManus, foremost writer in America on Irish affairs, tells tomorrow how emancipated Erin will have its own consular and national civil services; she is already urged to market her wares in France; land, now developing prize bullocks, will be restored to a hardier race of men. Reforestation and revival of the fisheries industries will be boons to agricultural and trade pursuits. The Sinn Fein loan is being snapped up and stimulated by England's repression tactics.

IT'S THE LOSER WHO DOES THE KICKING

"Automobile engines knock going up hill; men always knock when they are going down hill," says some writer.

Do you get the application?

Do you grumble and cuss your luck when you are on the downward slide?

Do you dwell too much on the thought of ill luck and not enough on the belief of brighter days to come?

Giving up to what you term your hard luck—which simply means that you carry it along with you without resistance—is the principal reason why you are continually up against it.

It is foolish for you to get into the way of thinking you are under a "jinx" and it is no use to try to break the spell.

Rouse yourself from your indecision and make up your mind that you won't be down and you will soon note an improvement in your condition.

Suppose it is a long, hard pull to make a success of yourself, you are an American—grit and perseverance bought freedom years ago and you can get it again even if everything does seem to be against you. It cannot continue for ever, so be strong and meet your problem half way and with your shoes on.

Then watch it solve itself.
